

Architectural Design Essay Example

The basic room you have to work with as well as how you plan to use it are crucial factors when signing your dining room. Size The size of the room helps dictate the colors and furnishings that are most suitable. A very small dining room, for example, would feel cluttered and overcrowded when paired with dark, heavy furniture, dark walls, and heavy drapes. Large rooms, on the particularly if the window is bright and airy and the walls are light-colored. If the room is very small, consider adding an additional window or wall cutout to enhance the space - windows that open into the kitchen are especially valuable and efficient.

To shrink a large room to a more manageable size, add tall plants, rich drapes, or additional pieces of furniture (a china cabinet for example). Formality A formal dining room meant for use only on special occasions needs different design consideration than an informal eatery. While candid family pictures may be appropriate for a casual setting, a formal portrait is a better accent in a formal room. Furthermore, a crystal chandelier is out of place in an informal room, while generic floor lamps are not suitable for a fine dining room.

Choosing the formality of the room will help determine these basic interior design choices. Ads by Google Bedroom Furniture 4000 Home & Garden Deals Await You. Grab What Fits Your House Now! Www. UK Frequency Designing your dining room can be an expensive project, and before you choose to create an opulent formal setting, consider how frequently you will use it.

If the dining room is pressed into service regularly for Sunday dinners, dinner parties, and holiday gatherings, it may be well worth it to seek professional advice, whereas if it is to be a usual or less frequently used room, your personal preferences may be all the design consultation you need. Accessibility One often overlooked consideration when designing dining rooms is accessibility. Naturally, there should be easy access to the kitchen, and if you plan on extensive entertaining it should be accessible to other gathering areas as well ( living room, home theater, etc. . Furthermore, the dining room should be near a bathroom for convenience. Not only does a dining room need to be accessible to other parts of the house, but it should be roomy enough that guests do not need to vacate their chairs o let other people pass or to retrieve dishes from a cabinet. Furniture The first consideration for dining room furniture should be the number of necessary chairs. Nothing will destroy a carefully designed dining room more quickly than importing folding chairs when extra seats are needed.
