This new handbook captures the exciting intellectual and professional development of our field in the last decade. It is an indispensable resource for faculty students and professionals. Jack Mezirow, emeritus professor, Adult and Continuing Education Teachers College, Columbia University. For nearly seventy years, the handbooks of adult and continuing education have been definitive references on the best practices, programs, and institutions in the field. In this new edition, over sixty leading authorities share their diverse perspectives in a single volume, exploring a wealth of topics including learning from experience, adult learning for self-development, race and culture in adult learning, technology and distance learning, learning in the workplace, adult education for community action and development, and much more. Much more than a catalogue of theory and historical facts, this handbook strongly reflects the values of adult educators and instructors who are dedicated to promoting social and educational opportunity for learners and to sustaining fair and ethical practices. Routledge Library Editions: Adult Education Various Authors, 2021-07-14. Against a background of profound worldwide social and economic change, the concept of lifelong learning has come increasingly into the public eye. As educators and policy makers rethink the meaning of education, the purpose of schooling, and the place of learning in our everyday lives, educational institutions are opening up to those traditionally deprived of the opportunity. The books in this set, originally published between 1979 and 1992, including global case studies, reflect upon major issues confronting adult educators worldwide and discuss the role of adult education in social and community action, examine the relationship between class and adult education, look at the concept of culture and the transmission of cultural values in relation to adult education, evaluate the role of adult education in reducing unemployment. Adult Education and the State Peter Jarvis, 2005-06-21. Adult education has frequently assumed a political role in society and also has itself been regarded as a social movement. This book, however, is the first systematic attempt to analyse it from the perspective of political theory. The author locates the education of adults within current political theory, something which has become even more relevant since the Conservative government of the UK has adopted an interventionist approach to education. Peter Jarvis starts from a historical perspective, examining the relationship between adult education and civil society and exploring theories of the state. He discusses the concept of democracy and shows that there are a variety of different forms with which the education of adults might be related. The idea of citizenship is also examined, and it is suggested that the education of adults might be regarded as a citizenship right which is being lost to all citizens as a result of current government policies. Peter Jarvis also looks at the relationship between liberal adult education and a civilised society, suggesting that its provision is one of the symbols that a society is moving on the long journey towards creating a civilised society. The final chapter illustrates the existence of utopian thought in radical adult education. The Organization and Planning of Adult Education Theodore J. Kowalski, 1988-09-13. The heightened interest in, and the rapid expansion of, adult education has become a trend in a variety of environments. In order to serve these developing areas, educators, personnel, directors, as well as staff development specialists, require improved methods for planning learning activities within their own unique organizational contexts In The Organization and Planning of Adult Education Kowalski examines the issues created by providing a social service in diverse organizational settings and presents a format for initiating and developing adult education programs In order to comprehend the complexity of the context of programming within an organization two novel components are included first a typology of sponsoring organizations is presented This allows the reader to study program development in greater detail through a categorization of the sponsoring institutions Second organizational theory is applied to the process of programming in adult education To be successful the adult educator must be able to analyze both the existing organizational climate as well as to devise programs compatible with this environment Kowalski has written a valuable resource and guide for those faced with the responsibilities of planning adult education programs in their own particular setting Resources in Education, 1998 Nursing Staff Development Russell C.
