European Archaeology as Anthropology Pam J. Crabtree, Peter Bogucki, 2017-03-21 Since the days of V Gordon

Childe the study of the emergence of complex societies has been a central question in anthropological archaeology. However, archaeologists working in the Americanist tradition have drawn most of their models for the emergence of social complexity from research in the Middle East and Latin America. Bernard Wailes was a strong advocate for the importance of later prehistoric and early medieval Europe as an alternative model of sociopolitical evolution and trained generations of American archaeologists now active in European research from the Neolithic to the Middle Ages. Two centuries of excavation and research in Europe have produced one of the richest bodies of archaeological data anywhere in the world. The abundant data show that technological innovations such as metallurgy appeared very early but urbanism and state formation are comparatively late developments. Key transformative processes such as the spread of agriculture did not happen uniformly but rather at different rates in different regions. The essays in this volume celebrate the legacy of Bernard Wailes by highlighting the contribution of the European archaeological record to our understanding of the emergence of social complexity. They provide case studies in how ancient Europe can inform anthropological archaeology. Not only do they illuminate key research topics, they also invite archaeologists working in other parts of the world to consider comparisons to ancient Europe as they construct models for cultural development for their regions. Although there is a substantial corpus of literature on European prehistoric and medieval archaeology, we do not know of a comparable volume that explicitly focuses on the contribution that the study of ancient Europe can make to anthropological archaeology.

Public Space in the Late Antique City (2 vols.) Luke Lavan, 2021-01-11. This book investigates the nature of public space in Mediterranean cities A.D. 284-650, meaning places where it was impossible to avoid meeting people from all parts of society, whether different religious confessions or social groups. The first volume considers the architectural form and everyday functions of streets, fora, agorai, market buildings, and shops, including a study of processions and everyday street life. The second volume analyses archaeological evidence for the construction, repair, use, and abandonment of these urban spaces based on standardised principles of phasing and dating. The conclusions provide insights into the urban environment of Constantinople, an assessment of urban institutions and citizenship, and a consideration of the impact of Christianity on civic life at this time.

City of Demons Dayna S. Kalleres, 2015-10-13. Although it would appear in studies of late antique ecclesiastical authority and power that scholars have covered everything, an important aspect of the urban bishop has long been neglected: his role as demonologist and exorcist. When the emperor Constantine made Christianity the official religion of the realm, bishops and priests everywhere struggled to Christianize the urban spaces still dominated by Greco-Roman monuments and festivals. During this period of upheaval, when congregants seemingly attended everything but their own orthodox church, many ecclesiastical leaders began simultaneously to promote aggressive and insidious depictions of the demonic. In City of Demons, Dayna S. Kalleres investigates this developing discourse and the church-sponsored rituals that went along with it, showing how shifting ecclesiastical demonologies and evolving practices of exorcism profoundly shaped Christian life in the fourth century.

Origins of the Colonnaded Streets in the Cities of the Roman East Ross Burns, 2017-06-02

The colonnaded axes define the visitor's experience of many of the great cities of the Roman East How did this extraordinarily bold tool of urban planning evolve The street instead of remaining a mundane passage a convenient means of passing from one place to another was in the course of little more than a century transformed in the Eastern provinces into a monumental landscape which could in one sweeping vision encompass the entire city The colonnaded axes became the touchstone by which cities competed for status in the Eastern Empire Though adopted as a sign of cities prosperity under the Pax Romana they were not particularly Roman in their origin Rather they reflected the inventiveness fertility of ideas and the dynamic role of civic patronage in the Eastern provinces in the first two centuries under Rome This study will concentrate on the convergence of ideas behind these great avenues examining over fifty sites in an attempt to work out the sequence in which ideas developed across a variety of regions from North Africa around to Asia Minor It will look at the phenomenon in the context of the consolidation of Roman rule
