point of consumption in most OECD and many middle income countries Coupled with massive build up of workforce capacities and strengthening of primary care and hospital networks all these factors contributed to the supplier induced demand phenomenon There is straightforward historical evidence of long term growth in pharmaceutical and overall health spending both in absolute and GDP% terms worldwide The accumulated constraints deriving from skyrocketing costs of care were felt in many areas of clinical medicine even among the richest societies Cardinal examples of expensive and hardly affordable therapeutic areas are orphan drugs indicated to treat rare diseases and targeted biologicals used in autoimmune disorders and cancer Last but not least is troubled and frequently denied access to even essential generic pharmaceuticals still taking place in many nations This appears to be particularly the case among the world's poor and under served citizens residing in rural and suburban areas of low and middle income countries To a large extent these difficulties are worsened by lack of evidence based resource allocation strategies and less sustainable financing strategies

Chapters on sources of epidemiological data on epidemiological study designs and on basic statistical measures for epidemiological studies are used to introduce the reader to the traditional underpinnings of epidemiological work. Attention then shifts to a wider canvas. Consideration is given to the critical reading of epidemiological research both as a way of demonstrating how different aspects of epidemiological study come together in published work and as the basis for a discussion of the centrality of epidemiological research in the development of evidence based health care. The key facets of evidence based health care are assessed. A more discursive and critical assessment of epidemiology is also presented in which attention is drawn to the need to develop alternative epidemiologies which draw on lay knowledge and recognise the socio political context of factors influencing health status. The book concludes with a description of the everyday practice of epidemiology in a UK health authority context. Epidemiology Moon, Graham, Gould, Myles, 2000-08-01 This text offers a comprehensive insight into the methods and principles of epidemiological study alongside an analysis of the broad context in which epidemiological work is undertaken. Evaluation for the Real World Palfrey, Colin, Thomas, Paul, 2012-06-13 Evaluation research findings should be a key element of the policy making process yet in reality they are often disregarded. This valuable book examines the development of evaluation and its impact on public policy by analysing evaluation frameworks and criteria which are available when evaluating public policies and services. It further examines the nature of evidence and its use and non use by decision makers and assesses the work of influential academics in the USA and UK in the context of evaluation and policy making. The book emphasises the real world of decision makers in the public sector and recognises how political demands and economic pressures can affect the decisions of those who commission evaluation research while providing recommendations for policymakers on adopting a different approach to evaluation. This is essential reading for under graduate and post graduate students of policy analysis and public sector management and those who are involved in the planning and evaluation of public policies and services. Advances in Health Economics Anthony Scott, Alan Maynard, Robert Elliott, 2005-12-13 It would be difficult to overstate the standing of the authors.
