the wider contexts of their interactions Different forms of material culture may be employed as affiliations shift and the connotations of any given set of artifacts may change In this volume the authors explore these overlapping spheres of social affiliation Social actors belong to multiple identity groups at any moment in their life It is possible to deploy one or many potential labels in describing the identities of such an actor Two main axes exist upon which we can plot experiences of social belonging the synchronic and the diachronic Identities can be understood as multiple during one moment or the extended moment of brief interaction over the span of a lifetime or over a specific historical trajectory From the Introduction The international contributions each illuminate how the various identifiers of race ethnicity sexuality age class gender personhood health and or religion are part of both material expressions of social affiliations and transient experiences of identity The Archaeology of Plural and Changing Identities Beyond Identification will be of great interest to archaeologists anthropologists historians curators and other social scientists interested in the mutability of identification through material remains

The Evolution of Opera Theatre in the Middle East and North Africa Paolo Petrocelli, 2019-09-12 This book is the first structured and complete research work undertaken on opera theatres across the entire Middle East and North Africa Until now no single study has looked at every theatrical and musical institute in these countries Many of the opera theatres that are examined here have had very little written about them at all This work fills this void in order to provide scholars and practitioners in the sector with the first reference work on the subject that will help our understanding of the evolutionary process that has led and continues to lead all the countries in the MENA region to equip themselves with an opera theatre

Shaikhdoms of Eastern Arabia P. Lienhardt, 2001-03-20 This pioneering study captures the traditional social economic and political systems of the Arab sheikhdoms of the Gulf It represents a unique and in depth insight into the complex and varied cultural patterns of the Arabs Persians and the people of the East African Coast in the 1950s before the advent of oil wealth radically altered the style of life and expectations of the people living in these sheikdoms In a compelling narrative Lienhardt discusses the tribal structure relations between men and women the economics of pearl fishing the growth of towns and the complex relationship between the ruling sheikhs and their subjects His findings offer a key to the understanding of the political system and the transition from the tribal to the class system Specialists on the Gulf and Middle East social historians and anthropologists will find a wealth of new evidence and analysis in this invaluable and accessible combination of history and anthropology

Creating the Arabian Gulf Paul John Rich, 2009-01-01 Whether called Arabian or Persian the Gulf is one of the most politically important regions of the world and its history is necessary in understanding the contemporary Middle East Paul Rich draws on previously closed archives to document the actual heritage of the area and dispel the myths showing that the influences of Britain and India are far deeper than commonly acknowledged and that the sheikhs are actually the creation of the British Raj

Loyola of Los Angeles international and comparative law journal, 1978 Transnational Connections and the Arab Gulf Madawi Al-Rasheed, 2005 Transnational Connections and the Arab

Gulf presents a study of transnational cultural flows in the Gulf region and beyond. It combines an understanding of the region's historical connections with the outside world and an assessment of contemporary consequences of these connections. The contributors collected here analyze and map historical and contemporary manifestations of transnational networks within this region, linking them to wider debates on society, identity and political culture. Critical Regionalism is a notion which gained popularity in architectural debate as a synthesis of universal modern elements and individualistic elements derived from local cultures. This book shifts the focus from Critical Regionalism towards a broader concept of Transcultural Architecture and defines Critical Regionalism as a subgroup of the latter. One of the benefits that this change of perspective brings about is that a large part of the political agenda of Critical Regionalism, which consists of resisting attitudes forged by typically Western experiences, is softened and negotiated according to premises provided by local circumstances. A further benefit is that several responses dependent on factors that initial definitions of Critical Regionalism never took into account can now be considered. At the book's centre is an analysis of Reima and Raili Pietilä's Sief Palace Area project in Kuwait. Further cases of modern architecture in China, Korea and Saudi Arabia show that the critique which holds that Critical Regionalism is a typical Western exercise is not sound in all circumstances. The book argues that there are different Critical Regionalisms and not all of them impose Western paradigms on non-Western cultures. Non-Western regionalists can also successfully participate in the Western enlightened discourse even when they do not directly and consciously act against Western models. Furthermore, the book proposes that a certain architectural rationality can be contained in architecture itself, not imposed by outside parameters like aesthetics, comfort or even tradition, but flowing out of a social game of which architecture is a part. The key concept is that of the form of life as developed by Ludwig Wittgenstein, whose thoughts are here linked to Critical Regionalism. Kenneth Frampton argues that Critical Regionalism offers something well beyond comfort and accommodation. What he has in mind are ethical precepts closely linked to a Cultural Change & Continuity In Central Asia Shirin Akiner, 2013-10-28. First published in 1991. Central Asia is a vast sprawling territory with no precise boundaries, no precise geographic definition. There is much detailed, closely focused research that remains to be done on every part of Central Asia. Sometimes, however, it is illuminating to stand back and look at the region as a whole, seeking similarities as well as contrasts. This volume is a collection of papers from a conference on Tradition and Change in Central Asia, which was held at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London, in April 1987.
