Excavations at Two Mississippian Hamlets in the Cairo Lowland of Southeast Missouri R. Barry Lewis, 1982

Mississippian Community Organization Michael J. O'Brien, 2005-12-11 The Powers Phase Project was a multiyear archaeological program undertaken in southeastern Missouri by the University of Michigan in the late 1960s and early 1970s. The project focused on the occupation of a large Pleistocene age terrace in the Little Black River Lowland, a large expanse of lowlying land just east of the Ozark Highland between roughly A.D. 1250 and A.D. 1400. The largest site in the region is Powers Fort, a palisaded mound center that received archaeological attention as early as the late nineteenth century. Archaeological surveys conducted south of Powers Fort in the 1960s revealed the presence of numerous smaller sites of varying size that contained artifact assemblages similar to those from the larger center. Collectively, the settlement aggregation became known as the Powers phase. Test excavations indicated that at least some of the smaller sites contained burned structures and that the burning had sealed household items on the floors below the collapsed architectural elements. Thus, there appeared to be an opportunity to examine a late prehistoric settlement system to a degree not possible previously. Not only could the spatial relation of communities in the system be ascertained, but the fact that structures within the communities had burned appeared to provide a unique opportunity to examine such things as differences in household items between and among structures and where various activities had occurred within a house. With these ideas in mind, James B. Griffin and James E.

Cahokia and the Hinterlands Thomas E. Emerson, R. Barry Lewis, 1991. Covering topics as diverse as economic modeling, craft specialization, settlement patterns, agricultural and subsistence systems, and the development of social ranking, Cahokia and the Hinterlands explores cultural interactions among Cahokians and the inhabitants of other population centers including Orendorf and the Dickson Mounds in Illinois and Aztalan in Wisconsin, as well as sites in Minnesota, Iowa, and at the confluence of the Mississippi and Ohio rivers. Proposing sophisticated and innovative models for the growth, development, and decline of Mississippian culture at Cahokia and elsewhere, this volume also provides insight into the rise of chiefdoms and stratified societies and the development of trade throughout the world. Archaeology of the Mississippian Culture

Peter N. Peregrine, 2013-04-11. First published in 1996, in recent years there has been a general increase of scholarly and popular interest in the study of ancient civilizations. Yet because archaeologists and other scholars tend to approach their study of ancient peoples and places almost exclusively from their own disciplinary perspectives, there has long been a lack of general bibliographic and other research resources available for the non-specialist. This series is intended to fill that need.

Archaeology of the Central Mississippi Valley Dan F. Morse, Phyllis A. Morse, 2014-05-10. Archaeology of the Central Mississippi Valley describes an archaeological reconstruction of the preceding 11,000 years of an extraordinarily rich environment centered within the largest river system north of the Amazon. The Prehistory of Missouri Michael John O'Brien, W. Raymond Wood, 1998 The Prehistory of Missouri is a fascinating examination of the objects that were made used and discarded or lost by Missouri's prehistoric inhabitants over a period of more than eleven thousand years Missouri's numerous vegetation zones and its diverse topography encompassed extreme variations forcing prehistoric populations to seek a wide range of adaptations to the natural environment As a result Missouri's archaeological record is highly complex and it has not been fully understood despite the vast amount of fieldwork that has been conducted within the state's borders In this groundbreaking account Michael J O'Brien and W Raymond Wood explore the array of artifacts that have been found in Missouri pinpointing minute variations in form They have documented the ranges in age and distribution of the individual forms explaining why certain forms persisted while others quickly disappeared Organized by chronological periods such as Archaic Woodland and Mississippian the book provides a comprehensive survey of what is currently known about Missouri's prehistoric peoples often revealing how they made their living in an ever changing world The authors have applied rigorous standards of archaeological inquiry Their main objective demonstrating that the archaeological record of Missouri can be explained in scientific terms is accomplished With more than 235 line drawings and photographs including 23 color photos The Prehistory of Missouri will appeal to anyone interested in archaeology particularly in the artifacts and the dates of their manufacture as well as those interested in the dichotomy between interpretation and explanation Intended for the amateur as well as the professional archaeologist this book is sure to be the new standard reference on Missouri's prehistory fulfilling current needs that extend beyond those met by Carl Chapman's earlier classic The Archaeology of Missouri Missouri Archaeological Society Quarterly, 1985

Towns and Temples Along the Mississippi David H. Dye, Cheryl Anne Cox, 1990-05-30 A Dan Josselyn Memorial Publication Specialists from archaeology ethnohistory physical anthropology and cultural anthropology bring their varied points of view to this subject in an attempt to answer basic questions about the nature and extent of social change within the time period The scholars overriding concerns include presentation of a scientifically accurate depiction of the native cultures in the Central Mississippi Valley prior and immediately subsequent to European contact and the need to document the ensuing social and biological changes that eventually led to the widespread depopulation and cultural reorientation Their findings lead to three basic hypotheses that will focus the scholarly research for decades to come Contributors include George J Armelagos Ian W Brown Chester B DePratter George F Fielder Jr James B Griffin M Cassandra Hill Michael P
