Diagnosis of Mycotoxicoes J.L. Richard,J.R. Thurston,2012-12-06 Current problems associated with the mycotoxicoes include the recognition of an animal disease as being a mycotoxicosis and confirmation of diagnosis of the mycotoxicosis by satisfactory laboratory methods By gathering a vast amount of scientific literature diagnosticians can provide themselves with suitable information for making such a diagnosis However the increased number of reported intoxications caused by fungi the wide range in diversity of disease conditions and the chemical compounds causing the mycotoxicoes and the ever changing and rapid developments in the technology of mycotoxin analysis has made the gathering and assimilation of sufficient information by the diagnostician an insurmountable task This is the reason for development of the symposium and the publication of this book the first time that the subject of diagnosis of mycotoxicoes has been assembled in a single publication and as a compilation of topic papers by experts in this subject area The UJNR panel on toxic microorganisms is interested in all aspects of intoxications by microorganisms as evidenced by its annual joint meetings in either the United States or Japan and its involvement in sponsoring numerous symposia and several publications in this broad scientific area The overall mission of the National Animal Disease Center includes research efforts in the improvement or establishment of diagnostic methods for animal diseases The UJNR panel and the NADC provided the funds and encouragement for the development of a symposium on the diagnosis of mycotoxicoes in the United States and Tapan Manipulation of Growth in Farm Animals J.F. Roche,D. O'Callaghan,2012-12-06 In some countries especially on the European continent there still exists a remarkable veal market This type of meat production seems irrespective of any economic forecasts to remain unchallenged so long as consumers expect that restaurants should offer courses like r6ti de veaux vitello a la casa or Kalbsschnitzel Producers at least since about the past 12 decades have been aware of the beneficial effect of anabolic agents in veal production This is possible due to the lack of endogenous sexual hormones during the juvenile or prepuberal status of these animals A discussion about the benefit risk evaluation in connection with the use of anabolic agents in general was promoted in recent years by the public This concern occurred concomitantly with the detection of illegally treated veal calves and the occurrence of diethylstilbestrol DES residues in canned food containing veal The aim of this paper is to summarize the present status of residue data in edible tissues and excreta in order to allow the evaluation of the risk given in the paper of Hoffmann within this program and to consider reasonable monitoring measures We have to face the fact that without an efficient control system the illegal treatment of calves can not be excluded Therefore this paper will not only consider different compounds and formulations but will also deal with practised routes of administration
