Faith In Science:

The Language of Science and Faith Karl W. Giberson, Francis S. Collins, 2011-01-28 World renowned scientist Francis Collins and fellow scientist Karl Giberson show how we can embrace both science and faith without compromising either. Their fascinating treatment explains how God cares for and interacts with his creation while science offers a reliable way to understand the world he made.

Facets of Faith and Science Jitse M. van der Meer, 1996-09-05 This first volume explores the specific roles of metaphysical and religious beliefs in explanation and theory construction in the natural sciences. It surveys modes of interaction between religion and science paying attention to the sensitivities required for their historiography.

Faith in Science Mark Richardson, Gordy Slack, 2005-07-05 PUBLICITY TITLE The high profile Science and the Spiritual Quest project has received strong media attention featuring in Time magazine and on the front cover of Newsweek. Popular science and the science religion debate are hot topics at the moment. The interviews in this volume include the most eminent scientists in their respective fields. Two are Nobel prize winners.

Pursuing Science, Finding Faith R. Lawson Bryan, 2012 Dr R Lawson Bryan never lost his passion for science even after he answered a calling to the ministry. A calling he discovered through his experience in a cancer research lab. For as long as he can remember he has been a person of both faith and science and he finds a profound and beautiful complementarity in these two fields that we so often view as contradictory. In Pursuing Science Finding Faith Dr Bryan shows us how faith and science can enable us to see the world with two eyes and gives us resources to continue developing our own understanding of their complementarity.

Faith, Science and Understanding John Polkinghorne, 2008-10-01 In this captivating book one of the most highly regarded scientist theologians of our time explores aspects of the interaction of science and theology. John Polkinghorne defends the place of theology in the university; it is part of the human search for truth and discusses the role of revelation in religion. It is a record of experience and not the communication of unchallengeable propositions. Throughout his thought provoking conversation Polkinghorne speaks with an honesty and openness that derives from his many years of experience in scientific research. A central concern of Polkinghorne's collection of writings is to reconcile what science can say about the processes of the universe with theology's belief in a God active within creation. The author examines two related concepts in depth. The first is the divine self limitation involved in creation that leads to an important reappraisal of the traditional claim that God does not act as a cause among causes. The other is the nature of time and God's involvement with it, an issue that Polkinghorne shows can link metascience and theological understandings. In the final section of the book the author reviews three centuries of the science and theology debate and assesses the work of major contemporary contributors to the discussion: Wolfhart Pannenberg, Thomas Torrance and Paul Davies. He also considers why the science theology discussion has for several centuries been a particular preoccupation of the English.

Faith or Science: Do We Have to Choose One? Leonard Brand, 2025-05-01 If we have faith in the Bible do we have to reject science? Why do we have to choose only one and reject the other Explore the answers to these questions and more with Professor Leonard Brand former department chair and professor of biology and paleontology in the Department of Earth and Biological Sciences at Loma Linda University California In this book he presents valuable insights from both sides giving us more than just superficial concepts yet presenting the information in a way that makes it understandable even to those who do not have an in depth background in biology and Earth sciences How We Believe, 2nd Edition Michael Shermer,2003-10 Recent polls show that 96% of Americans believe in God Why are people turning to religion in greater numbers than ever before In How We Believe Michael Shermer presents the results of an exhaustive empirical study in which he asked 10 000 Americans how and why they believe and about details of their faith The result offers fresh and startling insights into age old questions
