Faith And Fried Potatoes:

Faith and Fried Potatoes Grayce Bonham Confer, 1978-06-01 Say and Seal Susan Warner, 2023-11-21 Susan Warner's Say and Seal is a poignant exploration of childhood innocence juxtaposed against the complexities of love and loss. Set in the mid 19th century, the narrative unfolds through the eyes of a young boy as he navigates the trials of his upbringing, imbued with melodious verse that underscores the emotional currents of the story. Warner employs a lyrical prose style characteristic of sentimental literature that resonates with the reader and enhances the depth of her characters' inner lives. This book emerges in a period where literature often sought to depict moral lessons employing both the trials and tribulations of youth as metaphors for spiritual development. Susan Warner, a prominent figure in American literature, was influenced by her devout upbringing and the cultural milieu of her time, which shaped her understanding of morality, faith, and relationships. Her commitment to social causes and her experience as an educator inform the themes of nurturing and community evident in Say and Seal. These elements are artfully interwoven into her narrative, reflecting her belief in the transformative power of love, especially in a child's life. Say and Seal invites readers to reflect on their own experiences of love and loss, making it a timeless narrative that resonates across generations. Warner's mastery in blending sentiment with moral inquiry makes this book a worthwhile addition to any literary collection and a poignant read for those interested in the evolution of American literature.

Great elms which the early settlers planted waved their pendant branches over the peaceful highway and gave shelter and nest room to numerous orioles, killdeer and robins putting off their yellow leaves in the autumn and bearing their winter weight of snow in seeming quiet assurance that spring would make amends for all. So slept the early settlers in the churchyard. Along the street at pleasant neighbourly intervals not near enough to be crowded nor far enough to be lonely stood the houses comfortable, spacious, compact with no nonsense about them. The Mong lay like a mere blue thread in the distance, its course often pointed out by the gaff of some little sloop that followed the bends of the river up toward Suckiaug. The low rolling shore was spotted with towns and spires; over all was spread the fairest blue sky and floating specks of white. Not many sounds were astir: the robins whistled, thief-like, over the cherry trees; the killdeer from some high twig sent forth his sweet clear note; and now and then a pair of wheels rolled softly along the smooth road, the rush of the wind filled up the pauses Anybody who was down by the Mong might have heard the soft roll of his blue waters any one by the light house might have heard the harsher dash of the salt waves I might go on and say that if anybody had been looking out of Mrs Derrick s window he or she might have seen what Mrs Derrick really saw For she was looking out of the window or rather through the blind at the critical moment that afternoon It would be too much to say that she placed herself there on purpose let the reader suppose what he likes At the time then that the village clock was striking four when meditative cows were examining the length of their shadows and all the geese were setting forth for their afternoon swim a stranger opened Mrs Derrick s little gate and walked in Stretching out one hand to the dog in token of good fellowship a classical mind might have fancied him breaking the cake by whose help Quickear got past the lions he went up the walk neither fast nor slow ascended the steps and gave what Mrs Derrick called considerable of a rap at the door That done he faced about and looked at the far off blue Mong Not more intently did he eye and read that fair river not more swiftly did his thoughts pass from the Mong to things beyond human ken than Mrs Derrick eyed and read his back and suffered her ideas to roam into the far off regions of speculation The light summer coat the straw hat were nothing uncommon but the silk umbrella was too good for the coat the gloves and boots altogether extravagant Faith's Genesis Susan
