

Horse pasture management tips

Horses have 24/7 access to pasture and spend 60-70% of their time grazing.

Horses are selective grazers. They will deplete the best grass first, allowing for bare patches and weeds.

Stocking rates vary by:

Region, Time of year, Pasture quality
If pastures are poor a much larger area will be required.

Each horse requires 1-2 acres of healthy pasture.

Check with your local feed store or extension office for the best seeding and fertilization schedule in your area.

Chain harrow fields in spring and fall to spread manure, dead grass,
and even out rough areas.

Mow fields before weeds go to seed to keep undesirable plants from spreading. Mowing also evens out pasture grasses and stimulates growth.

Options if your space is limited.

Create a sacrifice area.

Turn horses out in this area when pastures need to rest or protection from hoof traffic during wet periods. This area allows horses the benefits of being outside without damaging or overgrazing pastures.

Practice limited turnout.

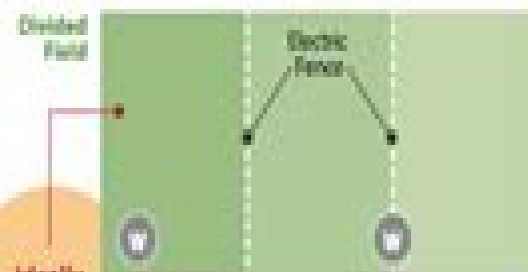

Set up a rotational grazing system.

Rotational grazing helps eliminate selective grazing, maintains good grass and minimizes weeds.

Divide your grazing area into smaller sections.

Allow horses to graze a section until it is between 2 to 4 inches tall.

Rotate the horses to the next section. Allow grass in first section to regrow to between 4 to 8 inches tall.

Ideally,
each section
should be big enough to sustain grazing for 4 to 7 days.

Be flexible with your schedule. You will need to test with what works best for the number of horses you have, your land and the time of year.

Elevate® provides highly digestible,
natural vitamin E, which is essential for horses without access to pasture.
