Third Series Library of Congress. Copyright Office, 1974 Automatic Assessment of Children's Speech to Support Language Learning Christian Hacker, 2009 Focus of this work are pattern recognition related aspects of computer assisted pronunciation training CAPT for second language learning An overview of commercial systems shows that pronunciation training is being addressed by the growing field of computer assisted language learning only to a small extent although in the state of the art section a number of such approaches for automatic assessment can already be presented In the present thesis different approaches are extended and combined In particular a large set of nearly 200 pronunciation and prosodic features is developed By this approach pronunciation scoring is regarded as classification task in high dimensional feature space Automatic speech recognition is the basis of most pronunciation scoring algorithms In this thesis a system is presented which supports second language learning at school i e the target users are children For this reason a state of the art speech recognition engine is adapted to children speech since young speakers are only hardly recognised by automatic systems Phonetically motivated rules for typical mispronunciation errors are integrated into the system to make it suitable for pronunciation scoring Evaluating an algorithm for pronunciation assessment is more difficult than simply counting the correctly recognised mistakes since there exists no objective ground truth This can be shown by evaluating the annotations of 14 teachers However with different measures it can be verified that the accuracy of the system in comparison with teachers thoroughly reaches the agreement among teachers The evaluation is conducted with native German speakers learning English

Relanguaging Language from a South African Township School Lara-Stephanie Krause-Alzaidi, 2021-12-20 Using data from a long term ethnographic study of English language classrooms in a South African township this book highlights linguistic expertise in a setting where it is not usually expected or sought Rather than being peripheral and unskilled South African township teachers and learners emerge as skilled re languagers central to the workings of South African education and to our understanding of how language classrooms work This book foregrounds the heterogeneity flexibility and creativity of day to day language practices that African urban spaces are known for and conceptualises language teaching not as a progression from one fixed language to another but as a circular sorting process between linguistic heterogeneity languaging and homogeneity a standard language
