Jean Bony, 2023-11-15 Gothic architecture is the most visible and striking product of medieval European civilization Jean Bony whose reputation as a medievalist is worldwide presents its development as an adventure of the imagination allied with radical technical advances the result of a continuing quest for new ways of handling space and light as well as experimenting with the mechanics of stone construction He shows how the new architecture came unexpectedly to be invented in the Paris region around 1140 and follows its history in the great cathedrals of northern France and dozens of other key buildings to the end of the thirteenth century when profound changes occurred in the whole fabric of medieval civilization Rich illustrations including comprehensive maps enhance the text and themselves constitute an exceptionally valuable documentation Despite its evident scholarly intention this book is not meant for specialists alone but is conceived as a progressive infiltration into the complexities of history at work revealing its unpredictable vitality to the uninitiated curious mind

Russia and the United States he offers a new view on the ideas projects and buildings otherwise so often considered only from narrow nationalistic perspectives Cohen also maps the problematic search for a national identity against the background of European rivalries and France's colonial past Drawing on a wealth of recent research this authoritatively written book will challenge the way design professionals and historians view modern French architecture     A History of French Architecture Sir Reginald Theodore Blomfield,1911     Architecture of France David A. Etlin,1995-02-07 Richard A Etlin explores the social and cultural hierarchies established in eighteenth century France to illustrate how the conceptual basis of the modern house and the physical layout of the modern city emerged from debates among theoretically innovative French architects of the eighteenth century Examining a broad range of topics from architecture and urbanism to gardening and funerary monuments he shows how the work of these architects was informed by considerations of symbolic space For Etlin the eighteenth century city was a place in which actual physical space was subjected to a complex mental layering of conceptual spaces He focuses on the design theory of Boull e and

Durand and charts their legacy through the architecture of Paul Philippe Cret Frank Lloyd Wright and Louis Kahn He defines the distinctive features of neoclassicism and outlines the new grammar for classical architecture articulated by theorists and architects such as Laugier Leroy and Ledoux After discussing the eighteenth century h tel revolutionary space and the transformation of the image of the cemetery Etlin examines the space of absence as embodied in commemorative architecture from Boull e and Gilly to Cret Wright and Terragni His book provides an accessible introduction to a century of architecture that transformed the classical forms of the Renaissance and Baroque periods into building types still familiar today
