Freshman Writer:

The Freshman Writer As Artist James Prothero, 2010-01 This work was conceived as a result of over eighteen years of teaching Freshman Composition at Orange Coast College Golden West College and Santa Ana College There are myriad essay collections i e readers out there of every variety and there are rhetorics which teach the rhetorical modes Most readers are also rhetorics Yet there are few books which teach more than the standard descriptive narrative and expository writing types which teach in fact what is called style Most books on style are designed for more advanced classes on rhetoric and composition but there are very few books on style for Freshman Composition It seems to be assumed that all a freshman can manage is a basic flat toneless but anatomically correct expository paper In my experience freshmen are capable of much more This book endeavors to fill the gap between the two because in fact most Freshman Composition students are capable of more than simple description and augmented five paragraph themes James Prothero has taught writing and literature at Orange Coast College Santa Ana College Golden West College and California Baptist University since 1991 He is author of the young adult novel Maggie of Long Hollow and numerous articles in scholarly and professional journals He also co edits an online poetry journal The Road Not Taken the Journal of Formal Poetry He is a fellow of the University of California at Irvine Writing Project and has also taught high school English in Santa Ana California The Freshman Writer Michele F. Framework for University Writing Instruction Anne Beaufort reports on a longitudinal study comparing one student's experience in FYC in history in engineering and in his post college writing Her data illuminate the struggle of college students to transfer what they learn about general writing from one context to another Her findings suggest ultimately not that we must abolish FYC but that we must go beyond even genre theory in reconceiving it Accordingly Beaufort would argue that the FYC course should abandon its hope to teach a sort of general academic discourse and instead should systematically teach strategies of responding to contextual elements that impinge on the writing situation Her data urge attention to issues of learning transfer and to developmentally sound linkages in writing instruction within and across disciplines Beaufort advocates special attention to discourse community theory for its power to help students perceive and understand the context of writing

Writing Workplace Cultures Jim Henry, 2000 In Writing Workplace Cultures An Archaeology of Professional Writing Jim Henry analyzes eighty three workplace writing ethnographies composed over seven years in a variety of organizations He views the findings as so many shards in an archaeology on professional writing at the beginning of the twenty first century These ethnographies were composed by either practicing or aspiring writers participating in a Master's program in professional writing and editing Henry solicited the writers participation in informed intersubjective research focused on issues and questions of their own determination Most writers studied their own workplace composing auto ethnographies that problematize these workplaces local cultures even as they depict writing practices within them Henry establishes links between current professional writing practices and composition instruction as both were shaped by national economic development and local postsecondary reorganization throughout the twentieth century He insists that if we accept basic principles of social constructionism the text demonstrates ways in which writers write workplace cultures to produce goods and services whose effects go far beyond the immediate needs of its clients

Reading-to-Write Linda Flower, Victoria Stein, John Ackerman, Margaret J. Kantz, Kathleen McCormick, Wayne C. Peck, 1990-09-20 The Social and Cognitive Studies in Writing and Literacy Series is devoted to books that bridge research theory and practice exploring social and cognitive processes in writing and expanding our knowledge of literacy as an active constructive process as students move from high school to college This descriptive study of reading to write examines a critical point in every college student's academic performance when he or she is faced with the task of reading a source integrating personal ideas and creating an individual text with a self defined purpose Offering an unusually comprehensive view of this process the authors chart a group of freshmen as they study and write in their dormitories recording their think aloud strategies for reading writing and revising their interpretation of the task and their broader social cultural and contextual understanding of college writing Flower Stein and colleagues convincingly conclude that the legacy of schooling in general makes the transition to college difficult and more important that the assumptions students hold and the strategies they use in undertaking this task play a significant role in their academic performance Embracing a broad range of perspectives from rhetoric composition literacy research literary and cultural theory and cognitive psychology this rigorous analysis treats reading to write as both a cognitive and social process It will interest researchers and theoreticians in rhetoric and writing teachers working with students in transition from high school to college and educators involved in the links between cognition and the social process

Writing at the End of the World Richard E. Miller, 2005-10-23 What do the humanities have to offer in the twenty first century Are there compelling reasons to go on teaching the literate arts when the schools themselves have become battlefields Does it make sense to go on writing when the world itself is overrun with books that no one reads In these simultaneously personal and erudite reflections on the future of higher education Richard E Miller moves from the headlines to the classroom focusing in on how teachers and students alike confront the existential challenge of making life meaningful In meditating on the violent events that now dominate our daily lives school shootings suicide bombings terrorist attacks contemporary warfare Miller prompts a reconsideration of the role that institutions of higher education play in shaping our daily experiences and asks us to reimagine the humanities as centrally important to the maintenance of a compassionate secular society By concentrating on those moments when individuals and institutions meet and violence results Writing at the End of the World provides the framework that students and teachers require to engage in the work of building a better future
