Tham,1992 Friction welding is one of the most productive metal joining processes yet this technology has not been applied in this country This research is an effort to design and fabricate a low cost friction welding machine based on the basic operation principles The structural frames the driving system the hydraulic system and the electrical control system were constructed to fulfill the requirements of welding with a flexible parameters The result was an automatic welding system capable of welding metal rods or equivalent of diameter ranged between 6 0 mm to 16 mm The performance tests showed that similar and dissimilar metals can be welded at plastic temperature without the need of any consumable In the welding of similar metal such as steel stainless steel or aluminium the macrograph and micrograph of the weldment showed that the weld zone is very narrow and has perfect fusion The grain structure is very fine and distributed in concentric pattern The tensile and bending test verified that the weld has good strength and ductility The micro vickers hardness test showed that there is a gradual hardness distribution across the selection of weldment The friction welding process is simple and fast it has the potential of handling high production at low cost The technology of friction welding machine is thus made available for Malaysian metal industry to build on their own the complete system      Friction Welding of Metals /translated from Russian by the Research Information Service Divison of Pergamon International Corp Vadim

Ivanovich Vill',1962      Corrosion of Weldments Joseph R. Davis,2006-01-01 Corrosion failures of industrial components are commonly associated with welding The reasons are many and varied For example welding may reduce the resistance to corrosion and environmentally assisted cracking by altering composition and microstructure modifying mechanical properties introducing residual stress and creating physical defects This book details the many forms of weld corrosion and the methods used to minimize weld corrosion Chapters on specific alloys groups carbon and alloy steels stainless steels high nickel alloys and nonferrous alloys describe both general welding characteristics and the metallurgical factors that influence corrosion behavior Corrosion problems associated with dissimilar metal weldments are also examined Case histories document corrosion problems unique to specific industries including oil and gas chemical processing pulp and paper and electric power Special challenges caused by high temperature environments are discussed Commonly used methods to monitor weld corrosion and test methods for evaluation of intergranular pitting crevice stress corrosion cracking and other forms of corrosion are also reviewed
