Maneka Jayasinghe, 2022-01-12 This book investigates the relationships between economies of scale in food consumption and a number of socio economic and demographic characteristics of households and household behavioural choices since food is the major share of household expenditure for poor households The characteristics considered comprise household size location income and gender of the head of household while the behavioural choices considered comprise the decision to consume home grown food and the decision to adopt domestic technology to aid food preparation and consumption The book proposes two theoretical models to rationalize the role of the consumption of home grown food and the adoption of domestic technology in enhancing economies of scale in food consumption Econometric models are also used to empirically test the validity of the two theoretical models while adjusted poverty estimations are derived numerically using the estimated equivalence scales Although data used in applying these techniques are based on four Household Income and Expenditure Surveys conducted by the Department of Census and Statistics DCS in Sri Lanka the methodology can be used for similar analysis in relation to any other country

World Economic Outlook, April 2012 International Monetary Fund. Research Dept., 2012-04-17 The April 2012 issue of the World Economic Outlook assesses the prospects for the global economy which has gradually strengthened after a major setback during 2011 The threat of a sharp global slowdown eased with improved activity in the United States and better policies in the euro area Weak recovery will likely resume in the major advanced economies and activity will remain relatively solid in most emerging and developing economies However recent improvements are very fragile Policymakers must calibrate policies to support growth in the near term and must implement fundamental changes to achieve healthy growth in the medium term Chapter 3 examines how policies directed at real estate markets can accelerate the improvement of household balance sheets and thus support otherwise anemic consumption Chapter 4 examines how swings in commodity prices affect commodity exporting economies many of which have experienced a decade of good growth With commodity prices unlikely to continue growing at the recent elevated pace however these economies may have to adapt their fiscal and other policies to lower potential output growth in the future

Regional Economic Outlook, October 2011, Sub-Saharan Africa International Monetary Fund. African Dept., 2011-10-26 This year looks set to be another encouraging one for most sub-Saharan African economies. Reflecting mainly strong demand but also elevated commodity prices, the region's economy is set to expand by more than 5.1-4 percent in 2011. For 2012, the IMF staff's baseline projection is for growth to be higher at 5.3-4 percent, owing to one-off boosts to production in a number of countries. There are, however, specters at the feast: the increase in global food and fuel prices, amplified by drought affecting parts of the region, has hit the budgets of the poor and sparked rising inflation; and hesitations in the global recovery threaten to weaken export and growth prospects. The projection for 2012 for the region is highly contingent on global economic growth being sustained at about 4 percent. A further slowing of growth in advanced economies, curtailing global demand, would generate significant headwinds for the region's ongoing expansion, with more globally integrated countries likely to be most affected. Policies in the coming months need to tread a fine line between addressing the challenges that strong growth and recent exogenous shocks have engendered and warding off the adverse effects of another global downturn. In some slower-growing, mostly middle-income countries without binding financial constraints, policies should clearly remain supportive of output growth, even more so if global growth sputters. Provided the global economy experiences the currently predicted slow and steady growth, most of the region's low-income countries should focus squarely on medium-term considerations in setting fiscal policy while tightening monetary policy wherever nonfood inflation has climbed above single digits In the event of a global downturn subject to financing constraints policies in these countries should focus on maintaining planned spending initiatives while allowing automatic stabilizers to operate on the revenue side For the region s oil exporters better terms of trade provide a good opportunity to build up policy buffers against further price volatility
