authoritarian regimes After 1990 some post communist farm economies progressed slower than others and environmental pressures mostly diminished with agricultural restructuring In parts of CEE increases in numbers of low input small farms have resulted in some though largely unintended ecological benefits A dual environmental challenge has nevertheless surfaced On one hand environmentally unsustainable practices have been attributed to some low input farming On the other hand risks of farm over intensification and resource overexploitation are on the rise Also environmental regulatory and institutional frameworks are not always effectively in place EU membership is not creating the anticipated benefits for farm growth There are a number of systemic structural barriers preventing many farmers from drawing on Common Agricultural Policy incentives and support The presence of many vulnerable poor farms is clearly problematic particularly economically However small scale farms could be made more acceptable and profitable by ensuring EU policies acknowledge their value and by building institutions to support alternative farm growth strategies aside from the traditional European model of individual corporate farm expansion The voluntary uptake of grassroots rural cooperation and farm associations may represent such an alternative Future European farm policy reforms need to reach the small and vulnerable and better tackle issues of farm equity poverty and agricultural sustainability in the new Europe This is a timely contribution as this type of transition has just begun This book should be of use to students and researchers looking at agricultural and environmental economics post communist rural societal change European integration and the Common Agricultural Policy
