Samuel J. Hunter, 2015-08-05 Excerpt from Elementary Studies in Insect Life Natural science studies are essentially studies of things not looks The teacher in preparing a course of instruction must be governed largely by the material procurable Work in marine biology can never be properly conducted away from the seashore nor tropical life thoroughly presented in the temperate zone In the study of animal life insects present a fertile field They outnumber all other forms and are ever accessible Under observation in their native haunts or in many cases surrounded by artificial conditions they conduct themselves naturally The study of insects has therefore come to form a prominent part of zoological instruction This book on insect life is divided into two parts Part I deals with the development of insects and their relations to their surroundings Part II is devoted to Methods Equipment and Laboratory Exercises The laboratory exercises consist of elementary work in the development structure function and systematic arrangement of insects The two parts are intended to be taken together About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Elementary Studies in Insect Life, by Samuel J.
