Death and Compassion Dan Wylie,2018-10-01 Traces the literary history of the elephant and its role in South Africa s cultural imaginary Elephants are in dire straits again They were virtually extirpated from much of Africa by European hunters in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries but their numbers resurged for a while in the heyday of late colonial conservation efforts in the twentieth. Now according to one estimate an elephant is being killed every 15 minutes. This is at the same time that the reasons for being especially compassionate and protective towards elephants are now so well known that they have become almost a cliché: their high intelligence, rich emotional lives including a capacity for mourning, caring, matriarchal societal structures that strangely charismatic grace. Saving elephants is one of the iconic conservation struggles of our time. As a society we must aspire to understand how and why people develop compassion or fail to do so and what stories we tell ourselves about animals that reveal the relationship between ourselves and animals. This book is the first study to probe the primary features and possible effects of some major literary genres as they pertain to elephants south of the Zambezi over three centuries: indigenous forms, early European travelogues, hunting accounts, novels, game ranger memoirs, scientists' accounts and poems. It examines what these literatures imply about the various and diverse attitudes towards elephants about who shows compassion towards them in what ways and why. It is the story of a developing contestation between death and compassion between those who kill and those who love and protect.
