What are the implications of the study? The implications of the study are that a low-intensity, supervised exercise program can be an effective intervention for older adults with chronic low back pain.

QUESTION A 60-year-old male with a 10-year history of type 2 diabetes mellitus presents with a 2-week history of increasing fatigue, weight loss, and decreased appetite. He reports that he has been unable to eat as much as he used to and has lost about 10 pounds. He also mentions that he has been feeling more tired than usual and has noticed some changes in his vision. He has no recent travel history and no known contact with anyone who has been ill. He is currently taking metformin and insulin. His last medical check-up was 6 months ago, where his blood sugar was well-controlled. He is a retired construction worker and lives with his wife. He has no other medical conditions and no family history of diabetes or related disorders.

ANSWER The patient's symptoms of fatigue, weight loss, and decreased appetite, along with his history of type 2 diabetes, suggest a possible complication of his condition. Given the chronic nature of his diabetes and the recent onset of these symptoms, a thorough evaluation is warranted. The most likely cause of these symptoms is a complication of diabetes, such as hypoglycemia or a diabetic complication like diabetic ketoacidosis (DKA) or hyperosmolar hyperglycemic state (HHS). However, the absence of recent travel and contact with ill individuals makes an infectious etiology less likely. A detailed medical history and physical examination, along with laboratory tests including blood glucose, hemoglobin A1c, and possibly a complete metabolic panel, would be necessary to confirm the diagnosis and guide treatment.

Sharing Spaces Finn Arne Jørgensen, Dolly Jørgensen, 2024-11-12. Human and animal lives intersect whether through direct physical contact or by inhabiting the same space at a different time. Environmental humanities scholars have begun investigating these relationships through the emerging field of multispecies studies, building on decades of work in animal history, feminist studies, and Indigenous epistemologies. Contributors to this volume consider the entangled human-animal relationships of a complex multispecies world where domesticated animals, wild animals, and people cross paths, creating hybrid naturecultures. Technology, they argue, structures how animals and humans share spaces. From clothing to cars to computers, technology acts as a mediator and connector of lives across time and space. It facilitates ways of looking at, measuring, moving, and killing, as well as controlling, containing, conserving, and cooperating with animals. Sharing Spaces challenges us to analyze how technology shapes human relationships with the nonhuman world, exploring nonhuman animals as kin, companions, food transgressors, entertainment, and tools.
