The Girl Scouts Rally: Rosanna Wins

Katherine Keene Galt,1921-01-01 Three little girls sat in a row on the top step of a beautiful home in Louisville At the right was a dark haired fairylike child on whose docked hair a velvet beret or French officer's cap sat jauntily Her dark eyes were round and thoughtful as she gazed into space There was a little wrinkle between her curved black brows Beside her busily knitting on a long red scarf sat a sparkling little girl whose hazel eyes danced under a fringe of blond curls Her dainty motions and her pretty way of tossing back her beautiful hair caused people to stop and look at her as they passed but Elise was all unconscious of their admiration Indeed she was almost too shy and few knew how full of fun and laughter she could be The third girl wore a businesslike beaver hat over her blond docked hair and her great eyes blue and steady were levelled across Elise who knitted on in silence to the dark girl in the velvet cap Helen Culver spoke at last Well Rosanna what are you thinking Have you any plan at all The dark child spoke No Helen I can't think of a thing It makes me so provoked Tell me will you not asked Elise in her pretty broken English She was trying so hard to speak like Rosanna and Helen that she could scarcely be prevailed upon to say anything in French Many months had passed since Elise in the care of the kind ladies of the American Red Cross had come over from France to her adopted guardian young Mr Horton She had grown to be quite American during that time and was very proud of her attainments The dark and dreadful past was indeed far behind and while she sometimes wept for her dear grandmother who had died in Mr Horton's tender arms in the old chateau at home she loved her foster mother Mrs Hargrave with all her heart And with Elise laughing and dancing through it the great old Hargrave house was changed indeed While Elise was crossing the ocean Mrs Hargrave had fitted up three rooms for her There was a sitting room that was like the sunny outdoors with its dainty flowered chintzes its ivory wicker furniture its plants and canaries singing in wicker cages Then there was a bedroom that simply put you to sleep just to look at it all blue and silver like a summer evening Nothing sang here but there was a big music box old as Mrs Hargrave herself that tinkled Elise to sleep if she so wished And the bathroom was papered so that you didn't look at uninteresting tiles set like blocks when you splashed around in the tub No there seemed to be miles and miles of sunny sea beach with little shells lying on the wet sand and sea gulls swinging
