Eliminating Fratricide From Attack Helicopter Fires: An Army Aviator's Perspective Major James A. Towe, 2014-08-15 In the aftermath of the euphoria brought on by our military victory in the Persian Gulf War is the realization that we still have much to learn The Persian Gulf War appears to have validated the quality of U S doctrine leadership and military prowess It showcased the technical superiority of our equipment and confirmed under fire the courage and competence of our soldiers sailors airmen and marines Yet even in an overwhelming victory there are painfully hard lessons to be learned or in the case of fratricide relearned Perhaps no other aspect of our failures strike the military psyche harder than fratricide This study will suggest that we do not have to accept the fratricide statistics of the past however factual as inevitable of future U S conflicts It will propose that the facts of fratricide should be gathered not as a casualty prediction planning tool but as a focus to design training and operational procedures which in conjunction with advanced technology will work towards the significant reduction if not the elimination of fratricide from attack helicopter fires Phantom Warriors Gary Linderer, 2008-12-10

Here are some of the most courageous missions executed by six man teams on their own deep behind enemy lines Ranging from the Central Highlands to the Mekong Delta to excursions authorized and unauthorized into Cambodia these gripping accounts begin when the call first went out for covert U S long range reconnaissance patrols in late 1965 continue through the battles of Tet and go all the way up to the final tortured pullout These are LRRP LRP and Ranger units at their finest under the most desperate circumstances one team surrounded by the enemy with no choice but to break out of the trap or die another caught in an ambush of horrific proportions When recon missions suddenly became contact missions when grenades started flying and AK 47s were smoking each man's life was instantly on the line and only his skills and the grit of his teammates could prevent certain death These highly trained warriors were among the best America had to offer and they gave their best no matter how high the price Advanced Well Completion Engineering Mr. Rohit Manglik, 2024-01-22
