focusing on children and childhood as a basis for ECEC policy to replace discourses of economic investment and child vulnerability that are dominant within policy goals in many countries A commitment to democracy and equity is a good place to start Aotearoa New Zealand is of special interest because of its world renowned ECE curriculum Te Whāriki which is based on principles of social justice respect for rights and an aim to support children growing up in a democracy The curriculum upholds Māori rights to tino rangatiratanga absolute authority over their lives and resources Yet Aotearoa New Zealand's extreme market policies and harsh labour laws during recent periods run contrary to ideals of democracy and are puzzlingly inconsistent with curriculum principles The book starts with an analysis and critique of global trends in ECEC in countries that share capitalist mixed economies of welfare and where competition and marketisation have become dominant principles It then analyses ideas about children childhood and ECEC within a framework of democracy going back to the Athenian origins of democracy and including recent literature on meanings and traditions of democracy in education The book uses vivid examples from researching curriculum pedagogy and assessment practices within Aotearoa New Zealand ECEC settings and collective action to influence policy change in order to illustrate opportunities for democratic education It concludes by examining what conditions might be needed for integrated and democratic ECEC provision in Aotearoa New Zealand and what changes are necessary for the future It offers a compass not a map it points to promising directions and provides insights into issues in ECEC policy and practice that are of current global concern

Early Childhood in the Anglosphere Peter Moss, Linda Mitchell, 2024-05-09 Written by two leading international experts Early Childhood in the Anglosphere offers a unique comparison of early childhood education and care services and parenting leave across seven high income Anglophone countries Peter Moss and Linda Mitchell explore what these systems have in common including the dominance of childcare services widespread privatisation and marketisation and weak parenting leave They highlight the substantial failings of these systems and the causes and consequences of these failings But this book is ultimately about hope about how these failings might be made good through major changes In other words it is about transformation why transformation is both necessary and possible at this particular time what transformation might look like and how it might happen Part of that transformation concerns the need for new policies and structures but even more it is about how the Anglosphere thinks about early childhood The authors call for turning away from conceptualising early childhood services as childcare and marketised businesses selling commodities to parent consumers and for reconceptualising them as education imbued with an ethics of care a public good available as a right to all children and families and complemented by well paid individual entitlements to parenting leave Using examples from the Anglosphere and beyond and in a context of converging crises the book argues that transformation of thinking policies and structures is desirable and doable

Student Engagement in Neoliberal Times Nick Zepke,2016-12-14 This book investigates origins meanings uses and effects of student engagement in higher education and addresses three core questions 1 Why is student engagement so visible in higher education today 2 What are its dominant characteristics 3 What is missing in the popular view of student engagement These questions pave the way for a fresh approach to student engagement The book argues that an elective affinity between student engagement and policies embedded in neoliberalism the dominant ideology of the early 21st century enables student engagement to transcend diverse intellectual and practice contexts This affinity encourages quality learning and teaching that enables student to succeed in their studies and future careers The book shows that focusing on neoliberal objectives for learning and teaching limits the potential of student engagement in higher education This conclusion leads to a critical and practical social ecological perspective that approaches engagement more as a pathway to social justice than as a list of techniques This book is a work of critical scholarship backed by empirical research It questions accepted theories and practices and offers fresh insights into
