Nabuurs, R. Päivinen, A. Pussinen, M.J. Schelhaas, 2021-11-22 In Europe forest policy discussions are moving towards a European Union wide strategy This will further strengthen the relations between the European countries in the field of forests and forest management European wide forest planning and decision making require that policy makers have insight in the long term development of European forests under alternative regimes The European Forest Information Scenario Model EFISCEN was used to make projections of the development of the European forests under four different scenarios This book addresses the consequences of each scenario for wood production biodiversity and the environmental functions of the forest The results provide policy makers with a challenge of whether to intervene in the ongoing trend of build up of growing stock and whether to choose between enhancing biodiversity increasing the use of domestically produced wood products or to combine them      Virgin Forests and Forest Reserves in Central and East European Countries Jurij Diaci, 1999      Ecology of Central European Forests Christoph Leuschner, Heinz Ellenberg, 2017-09-22 This handbook in two volumes synthesises our knowledge about the ecology of Central Europe s plant cover with its 7000 yr history of human impact covering Germany Poland the Netherlands Belgium Luxembourg Switzerland Austria Czech Republic and Slovakia Based on a thorough literature review with 5500 cited references and nearly 1000 figures and tables the two books review in 26 chapters all major natural and man made vegetation types with their climatic and edaphic influences the structure and dynamics of their communities the ecophysiology of important plant species and key aspects of ecosystem functioning Volume I deals with the forests and scrub vegetation and analyses the ecology of Central Europe s tree flora whilst Volume II is dedicated to the non forest vegetation covering mires grasslands heaths alpine habitats and urban vegetation The consequences of over use pollution and recent climate change over the last century are explored and conservation issues addressed      Development of Forest Resources in the European Part of the Russian Federation A.I. Pisarenko, V.V. Strakhov, R. Päivinen, K. Kuusela, F.A. Dyakun, V.V. Sdobnova, 2000-12-07 According to the FAO s State of the world s forests 1999 the total forest area in Russia is 764 million hectares In the international statistics the forest resource of Russia is treated as one unit One quarter of this vast forest area approximately as much forest as all the other European countries together is in the European part of Russia west of the Ural mountains This report will complete the picture of European Forests given in the EFI Research Report No 1 by Kullervo Kuusela in 1994 The first aim of this study is to describe the distribution and development of forest resources in the European part of Russia Due to the availability of basic information this study concentrates on lands under the authority of the Federal Forest Service of Russia which cover more than 80% of the forest area The emphasis is on wood resources non wood goods and benefits have not been discussed in detail Secondly the study is an effort towards better comparability between forest statistics in Russia and other European countries The traditions of Russian forestry and forest inventory concepts differ from the other European countries which in the past have caused misinterpretations in the comparison of the statistics between the countries The third aim has been to cross check the consistency of available information by analysing the dynamics of the forest resources from 1966 to 1993 It is hoped that this study is able to fill in some voids in the information about Russian forest resources and that forest researchers students forestry experts policy makers and the public will be able to see more clearly the historical development and future potentials of Russian forestry It must be kept in mind that forestry is not only wood production it deals with nature conservation protective and recreational functions of forests and other non wood benefits and services which in some forests play the main role However due to the availability of quantitative data high potential for creating income and its indirect effects on other types of forest utilisation analysis of wood production is one of the basic elements in describing the potentials for utilising forest resources as a whole
