European Theater Of Operations Lorraine Campaign:

The Lorraine Campaign Hugh Cole, 2015-07-29 Includes maps In 1946 the Historical Division of the War Department made plans for the preparation of a nine volume series recounting the history of the European Theater of Operations There was no precedent in the experience of the United States Army for an official narrative account of military operations on the grand scale Careful study of the official histories produced by the European combatants after World War I showed that these histories could offer little in the way of a pattern for recording the European campaigns of 1944 and 1945 The drastic change from the trench warfare of 1914 18 to the mobile operations of 1944 45 had complicated the task of the military historian In World War I a tactical situation represented by three divisions rising from the trenches in simultaneous attack on a narrow front permitted a reasonable unity in treatment and allowed the historian to write at the level of the army corps Thirty years later that same frontage might be held by a single reinforced regiment The fluid condition of the combat zone in World War II and the wide dispersion of troops over the battle area resulting from the impact of the tank the plane the machine gun the truck and the radio telephone inevitably induced a degree of fragmentization and an unavoidable lack of sequence in the narrative of events on the battlefields of 1944 and 1945 It was decided therefore that the common denominator in the present series would be the division since the division represents the basic tactical and administrative unit of the combined arms Although emphasis is placed on the division organization by chapters generally will follow the story of the army corps as a means of achieving narrative and tactical unity The Lorraine Campaign is the first volume to be published in the projected series embracing the history of the American armies in the European Theater of Operations This volume deals with the campaign waged by the Third Army in Lorraine during the period 1 September 18 December 1944 Since it has been impossible to organize the writing of individual volumes so that they may be published in the chronological sequence followed by military operations the reader interested in the history of the Third Army before or after the events here set forth must wait until the appropriate volumes are completed The present volume is concerned with the tactical operations of the Third Army and its subordinate units The story of command and decision in higher headquarters is told only when it has a direct bearing on the campaign in Lorraine The logistics of this campaign likewise have been subordinated to the tactical narrative The basic unit in the present narrative is the infantry or armored division The story of the division has been told in terms of its regiments and battalions but swerves on occasion to the company or the platoon just as the operations themselves turned on the exploits of these smaller units The Lorraine Campaign Hugh Marshall Cole, 1984 This account focuses on the tactical operations of the Third Army and its subordinate units between 1 September and 18 December 1944 The Lorraine Campaign Hugh Marshall Cole, 1950 "The" Lorraine Campaign Hugh M. Bracketing the Enemy John R. Walker,2013-08-08 After the end of World War

II General George Patton declared that artillery had won the war Yet howitzers did not achieve victory on their own Crucial to the success of these big guns were forward observers artillerymen on the front lines who directed the artillery fire Until now the vital role of forward observers in ground combat has received little scholarly attention In Bracketing the Enemy John R Walker remedies this oversight by offering the first full length history of forward observer teams during World War II As early as the U S Civil War artillery fire could reach as far as two miles but without an FO forward observer to report where the first shot had landed in relation to the target and to direct subsequent fire by outlining or bracketing the targeted range many of the advantages of longer range fire were wasted During World War II FOs accompanied infantrymen on the front lines Now for the first time gun crews could bring deadly accurate fire on enemy positions immediately as advancing riflemen encountered these enemy strongpoints According to Walker this transition from direct to indirect fire was one of the most important innovations to have occurred in ground combat in centuries Using the 37th Division in the Pacific Theater and the 87th in Europe as case studies Walker presents a vivid picture of the dangers involved in FO duty and shows how vitally important forward observers were to the success of ground operations in a variety of scenarios FO personnel not only performed a vital support function as artillerymen but often transcended their combat role by fighting as infantrymen sometimes even leading soldiers into battle And yet although forward observers lived fought and bled with the infantry they were ineligible to wear the Combat Infantryman s Badge awarded to the riflemen they supported Forward observers are thus among the unsung heroes of World War II Bracketing the Enemy signals a long overdue recognition of their distinguished service
