Storied Communities Hester Lessard, Rebecca Johnson, Jeremy Webber, 2011-01-01 Political communities are defined and often contested through stories Scholars have long recognized that two foundational sets of stories narratives of contact and narratives of arrival helped to define settler societies We are only beginning to understand how ongoing issues of migration and settlement are linked to issues of indigenous settler contact Storied Communities disrupts the assumption in many works that indigenous and immigrant identities fall into two separate streams of analysis The authors do not attempt to build a new master narrative they instead juxtapose narratives of contact and arrival as they explore key themes narrative and narrative form the nature and hazards of storytelling in the political realm and the institutional and theoretical implications of foundation narratives and storytelling By bringing to light the links between narratives of contact and narratives of arrival this volume opens up new ways to imagine sustain and transform political communities

Between Governing and Governance Poul F Kjaer, 2010-02-05 This book explains the emergence and functioning of three forms of governance structures within the context of the European integration and constitutionalisation process comitology regulatory agencies and the Open Method of Co ordination The point of departure is the insight that the intergovernmental supranational distinction which most theories of European integration and constitutionalisation rely on has lost its strength A new paradigm of EU research is therefore needed Against this background it is suggested that the distinction between governing and governance provides a more appropriate basis for analysing the phenomenon of integration and constitutionalisation in Europe The distinction between governing and governance allows for an understanding of the EU as a hybrid consisting of a governing dimension characterised by legal and organisational hierarchy and a governance dimension which operates within a network form characterised by legal and organisational heterarchy The function of governance structures is to ensure the embeddedness of the governing dimension in the wider society Instead of representing contradictory developments the two dimensions are therefore mutually constitutive in the sense that more governing implies more governance and vice versa These theoretical insights are illustrated through two detailed case studies which respectively reconstruct the operational mode of the Open Method of Coordination within EU Research Development Policy and the regulatory system for the EU chemicals market REACH The book is inter disciplinary in nature and incorporates insights from law political science and sociology

Modernism and the Grounds of Law Peter Fitzpatrick, 2001-05-02 Existing approaches to the relation of law and society have for a long time seen law as either autonomous or grounded in society Drawing on untapped resources in social theory Fitzpatrick finds law pivotally placed in and beyond modernity Being itself of the modern law takes impetus and identity from modern society and through incorporating pre modern elements of savagery and the sacred it comes to constitute that very society When placing law in such a crucial position for modernity Fitzpatrick ranges widely from the colonizations of the Americas through the thought of the European Enlightenment and engages finally with contemporary arrogations of the global By extending his previous work on the origins of modernity this book makes a significant contribution to continuing developments in law and society legal philosophy and jurisprudence
