Educating Professionals:

Educating Professionals Lynn Curry, Jon F. Wergin, 1993-04-20 In 13 original chapters the authors identify the social and political forces that will affect the roles of professionals and change the definitions of professional skill They explain how professional schools can meet the changing requirements of practice And they show how educating professionals for the 21st century will ultimately require stronger bonds between educational systems of practice including more accurate measures of competence

Educating Professionals Steven M. Shardlow, 2016-04-29 How do health and social care professionals learn their practice What can the professions learn from each other This book offers a comprehensively written account of the recent organizational and conceptual changes in UK practice education Using case examples the authors focus on the experiences of students learning in practice settings how this is organized what methods are used to help students learn their trade and how their abilities are assessed The book offers separate chapters on nine professions all by authors well established in writing about practice based learning in their field They present an exploration in areas of similarity and difference in expertise and outlook between professions whilst introducing the general concepts that translate between professions This book will be of great interest to academics and professional in the fields of health studies and social work

Educating Professional Psychologists Glenn R. Caddy, 1982-01-01 Health Professions Education/nurse Training and National Health Service Corps, 1981 United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Labor and Human Resources, 1981 Ethical and Social Issues in Professional Education Celeste M. Brody, James Wallace, 1994-07-01 This book reflects and extends the great debates that schools colleges and universities are having in response to the profound moral conflicts and personal questions facing professionals today What should we teach our students What values should we communicate and nurture What should be the role of the traditional liberal arts in professional education How should schools and colleges respond to the demands of women and minorities for a more inclusive curriculum The authors explore ongoing theoretical and practical considerations of graduate professional education through the ethical and social issues facing professionals in public service Administrators teachers counselors nurses or lawyers are recognizing that they face similar questions about their personal and professional lives Is it possible to sustain a set of fully human values as a practicing professional As a member of a public organization how does one deal with dilemmas involving conflicting priorities and ambiguous goals The authors responses to these questions are presented as themes describing connections between curriculum and pedagogy They have designed an approach to ethical and social questions respectful of the contributions of adult learners and the need to provide diverse perspectives

Teacher Education Policy Rob McBride,2003-12-16 To improve schools we need to improve teachers This volume provides recent research evidence that suggests that current education policy is not Promoting Effective Teacher Education And That Teacher Education Policy has failed to support the formation of professional partnerships in initial teacher education has almost ignored the induction of newly qualified teachers and has narrowed in service education into support for the implementation of central policy The evidence gathered in this book is used to argue for new forms of teacher education in every phase built upon the foundation of professional partnership between schools and institutions of higher education It is suggested that the funding for such changes could be drawn from less effective forms of school improvement such as National Curriculum development and school inspection With the implementation of such changes it is argued good quality teacher education programmes would prosper and foster a broad concensus about educational development that is often absent
