The Single Market Great Britain: Parliament: House of Lords: European Union Committee, 2008-02-08 This report is about the need for the Commission and Member States to take action in order to prevent the Single Market project from failing to achieve expectations Increased competition lower prices and a wider choice of products and services are the potential benefits to consumers access to an enormous home market is the potential benefit to business In reality the failure of Member States to implement important legislation has maintained barriers and prevented the fuller completion of the Single Market This failure is aggravated by the growing trend towards economic protectionism in a number of Member States Misguided attempts to protect domestic industries and safeguard national jobs are preventing consumers and businesses from reaping the full benefits of a truly open Single Market The EU needs to reassess the tools it uses The legislative route is not always the most effective means for achieving Single Market goals The increased use of other non legislative tools will help to overcome the difficulties of legislating for an expanded EU National Regulatory Authorities NRAs must be independent of government especially where governments have financial interests in the major market operator or national incumbent There is no need for a super regulator at EU level in any of the sectors considered in this inquiry energy telecommunications and financial services Achieving consistent implementation begins with effective policy making based on detailed sector specific understanding Currently very few SMEs are engaged in cross border activity and this is largely due to the regulatory barriers which remain in place and the lack of reliable information to assist businesses The Committee welcomes the objective of engaging small business in the Single Market

The Impact of Union Citizenship on the EU's Market Freedoms Alina Tryfonidou, 2016-02-25 The book's aim is to consider the impact that the introduction and development of the status of Union citizenship has had on the interpretation of the EU's market freedoms. Starting by providing in its introductory part part one a comprehensive and up-to-date analysis of the status of Union citizenship and its development from 1998 onwards, the book proceeds in part two to provide an in-depth examination of the relationship between this status and the EU's market freedoms. The central argument of the book is that as a result of the move towards the creation of a meaningful status of Union citizenship, the market freedoms have been reconceptualised as fundamental Union citizenship rights, and their interpretation has adapted accordingly. Part three of the book analyses the result of this process of transforming the market freedoms into sources of fundamental Union citizenship rights and considers where it is likely to lead in the future. It demonstrates that despite the fact that this development appears to be the next natural step in the process of constructing a meaningful notion of Union citizenship, it brings with it a number of issues that the EU will have to consider and carefully address. In particular, the method which the Court seems up until now to have employed to facilitate the metamorphosis of the market freedoms into citizenship rights has led to criticisms on the grounds of legitimacy and coherence and will undoubtedly lead to further problems in the future. Hence, part three of the book also identifies the difficulties that may emerge as a result of this process and suggests ways in which they may be overcome.
