It covers issues which are typically related to the most popular type of events: festivals. This book studies the origins, history, and the main factors of festival development, as well as the concept of a festival in the context of various scientific disciplines. It presents the existing festival typologies, as well as the author's own comprehensive typology. The theoretical part concerns the basic research methods and approaches used in the analysis of these events, as well as their impacts on the urban space, the physical festival facilities, social aspects, a place where people may pursue their interests, meet with family and friends, and cultural aspects. The economic aspect of festivals, generating jobs and income from tourism, using festivals for city branding, etc., is also discussed. The book presents practical examples in sub-chapters, references to literature for further reading, and the case study of the influence of festivals on urban space management and urban development, using the example of a Polish post-socialist city. It may also be treated as a supplementary course book for students of urban geography, urban regions management, tourism, event management, and to a certain extent, anthropology of culture and sociology.
