Empirico-Statistical Analysis of Narrative Material and its Applications to Historical Dating A.T.

Fomenko,2013-11-11 Today the methods of applied statistics have penetrated very different fields of knowledge including the investigation of texts of various origins. These texts may be considered as signal sequences of different kinds: long genetic codes, graphic representations which may be coded and represented by a text as well as actual narrative texts, for example historical chronicles, originals, documents, etc. One of the most important problems arising here is to recognize dependent texts, i.e. texts which have a measure of resemblance arising from some kind of common origin. For instance, in pattern recognition problems it is essential to identify from a large set of patterns a pattern that is closest to a given one. In studying long signal sequences it is important to recognize homogeneous subsequences and the places of their junction. This includes, in particular, the well known change point problem which is given considerable attention in mathematical statistics and the theory of stochastic processes. As applied to the study of narrative texts, the problem of recognizing dependent and independent texts, e.g. chronicles, leads to the problem of finding texts having a common source, i.e. the same original. Such texts are naturally called dependent or, on the contrary, having different sources, such texts are naturally called independent. Clearly, such problems are exceedingly complicated and therefore the appearance of new empirico-statistical recognition methods which, along with the classical approaches, may prove useful in concrete studies, e.g. source determination, is welcome.
