

The Electoral College: Annotated Bibliography

Our country is founded on democracy and the freewill of the people, but in two elections within the past two decades the majority of citizens in the United States voted for the losing candidate. This is a direct result of the system called the Electoral College. Below are the sources I have acquired throughout the week of March 24, 2019. I intend to complete my draft by April 1, 2019 with submission of final on April 8, 2019. The resources were acquired based on several questions I desired to answer: While the Electoral College may have proved vital to the creation and existence of the early United States, does its current form holds no such function or value. I intend to research if the Electoral College has outlived its purposefulness and contradicts the founding principles of the Constitution and even of the twelfth amendment. Additionally, I seek to answer those that argue the Electoral College is necessary to uphold states' rights and the representation of small states'. Is this archaic institution silencing the voices of the people it claims to represent, and should it be abolished or at the least reformed before the next Presidential election.

Aldrich, et al, in the article "Sophisticated and Myopic? Citizen Preferences for Electoral College Reform" suggest that different institutions can produce more (or less) preferred outcomes, in terms of citizens' preferences. The authors investigate whether citizens acting on established preferences is accepted by an original observed dataset conducted before the 2004 election. The author's purpose is to show the reader that support for a reform to split a states' Electoral College votes is explained by which candidate is expected to win the election under the existing system, preferences for abolishing the Electoral College in favor of the popular vote winner, and statistical connections amongst these variables. The authors write in an analytical tone for their audience.
