Elder Care Policies In China The Social Value Foundation Is In The Family:

Elder Care Policies In China: The Social Value Foundation Is In The Family William T Liu, 1999-01-05 If modernisation means mass longevity it raises hopes that everyone may enjoy a full span of years It also brings the fear that many will not be able to take care of themselves and will rely upon society to provide special care Modernisation in this sense also means the rise of the welfare state let the government take care of the frail and the old Mass aging has proven to be a financial crisis for welfare states in the advanced economies of the West it also raises questions about the future of family based care in the East while professionals and academicians in the advanced economies of the West continue to debate about whose responsibility it is to take care of the elders the state or the individual governments in East Asia hold firmly to the position that it is the family that has the primary responsibility to take care of old members and that the government's role is to assist families in discharging elder care responsibilities This publication examines some of the often raised questions identified in the research literature in the past 25 years for example the nature and scope of caregiving the issue of care burden and the claim that family based care is really women care that is sex biased The author marshals evidence to show from studies conducted in China that care burden is a complex form of social relations that is shaped by the culture Furthermore the gender and type of relations may largely determine in what type of kin relations are the subjective feelings of burden the greatest and where objective indications of burden may remain constant In conclusion the author suggests that the best common resolution for both the East and the West is to establish a workable partnership between the state and the family in facing the forthcoming crisis of elder care in a fully aged society Elder Care Policies in China William Thomas Liu, 1998

Chinese Foreign Investment Laws Huaqun Zeng,1999 Prepared by the East Asian Institute NUS which promotes research on East Asian developments particularly the political economic and social development of contemporary China including Hong Kong and Taiwan this series of research reports is intended for policy makers and readers who want to keep abreast of the latest developments in China This volume summarises four features of the common principles of foreign investment laws in market economies and surveys four aspects of recent developments in Chinese foreign investment laws towards these principles

China's Politics and Economy in 2003 John Wong,Yongnian Zheng,Liang Fook Lye,2003 With the new team of Chinese leaders at the helm following the successful hosting of the 16th Party Congress in November 2002 the attention of China s scholars has now shifted to the raft of challenges that await the new leadership In the economic realm there is unlikely to be any sharp changes in the direction of economic policy making although the leadership faces a number of daunting issues such as rising urban unemployment potential rural unrest and the huge debt burden of state banks In the political arena power succession has only just begun even though leadership transition is almost complete Jiang Zemin remains highly influential in his capacity as Chairman of the Central Military Commission It is however unclear how the working relationship among the triumvirate Hu Jintao Zeng Qinghong and Wen Jiabao will unfold The jury is still out whether Hu Jintao can provide the leadership and vision to deal head on with a number of burning issues like corruption and the need for political reform

China's WTO Accession and the Impact on Its Large Manufacturing Enterprises Guy Shaojia Liu,2001 The greatest success of Chinese enterprise reform has been the creation of market competition Competition has forced the state to retreat from non strategic sectors and increased private ownership in the industry This development has created ownership diversification in the Chinese industry which is in line with the leadership s 2 R Retreat and Retain enterprise reform policy The ownership diversification is a distinction of the reformed economy called a socialist economy with Chinese characteristics The backbone of the economy is the large state firms in strategic sectors largely shielded from international competition in which most of them have been coping well with the domestically competitive environment After China's entry to the WTO can these firms still maintain their market dominance once all forms of protection are dismantled Are Chinese firms ready for direct competition with their foreign rivals in the manufacturing sector Will FAW China's No 1 state owned automotive corporation be defeated on its home ground by its foreign rivals in a freely accessed market The core of these questions is about the sustainability of diversified ownership in the economy after it is integrated with the world trading system Who will dominate the Chinese industry after the WTO entry foreign or private ownership The question is addressed by applying the market structure and entry theory of industrial economics since WTO accession will basically result in change in both the market type and the market structure of the industry Based on this the study developed the market share testing theory to assess the competitiveness of dominant incumbents according to the type of market The overall finding is that most large state incumbents will survive but their survival strategy will be changed from single ownership control to mixed ownership control Thus it is expected that more joint ventures between foreign and large state owned firms will emerge in the post WTO entry economy But whether such firms will evolve into foreign controlled state owned firms is an interesting question which remains to be answered

China's Politics and Economy in 1999 Yongnian Zheng, John Wong, 2000 What the Jiang Zemin leadership faced in 1999 can be characterized by a century old Chinese saying neiyou waihuan literally internal disturbance and external threat What with the worst growth record in a decade the Falun Gong sect's siege of Zhongnanhai NATO's bombing of the Chinese embassy in Yugoslavia and Lee Teng hui's new two state theory the Chinese leadership was under tremendous pressure throughout the year Many have wondered if that leadership could still hold its own at the turn of the century This volume provides the reader with an in depth analysis of how the Chinese leadership coped with the crises during the year Though there was fair success in managing those crises serious crises lie ahead which could significantly impact the leadership China's economic slowdown may be bottoming out but increasing Party decay a growing spiritual vacuum and volatile cross strait relations are likely to pose serious threats to the leadership China's Political And Economic Trends In 2001 John Wong, Yongnian Zheng, 2001-06-21 At the beginning of the new century China's leadership is preparing the ground for a smooth transfer of power from the third generation to the fourth generation leaders Politicking among different factions has intensified as top leaders who are slated to step down after the 16th National Party Congress in 2002 jockey to put their imprint on the new power configuration How have President Jiang Zemin and Premier Zhu Rongji dealt with the leadership succession while at the same time keeping an eye on the economy What kind of power sharing will be brokered among the different factions Are the fourth generation leaders ready to take over the reins of power And will China be able to maintain high growth even as it goes through this period of power transition The articles in this publication address those issues

Waning Of The Jiang-zhu Coalition, The: China After The 2000 National People's Congress John Wong, Yongnian Zheng, 2000-06-15 With mounting discontent due to widespread unemployment corruption and misgovernment the Ninth

National People's Congress in March 2000 was a letdown. Significant though was Premier Zhu Rongji's announcement at the Congress of the leadership's decision to go west. While Zhu explained the policy shift as the government's attempt to develop the country's inland regions, many are skeptical, dismissing it as a camouflage for the premier's failure in the reform programmes introduced when he came to power. On the international front, with the US ambivalence in regard to China's WTO accession and China's apparent loss of grip on cross-strait relations, the future of the Jiang-Zhu coalition appears to be in the balance. Against this background of neiyou waihuan (internal disturbance and external threats), will the Jiang-Zhu coalition be able to rise to the occasion and push through its many reform programmes, let alone retain its hold on power in China? After the 2000 National People's Congress I and II address this and related questions, giving an in-depth analysis of recent developments and changes in the power relations among China's top leaders, especially the Jiang-Zhu coalition.

China's Politics And Economy In 1999: Coping With Crises John Wong, Yongnian Zheng, 2000-03-30. What the Jiang-Zemin leadership faced in 1999 can be characterized by a century-old Chinese saying: neiyou waihuan (literally internal disturbance and external threat). What with the worst growth record in a decade, the Falun Gong sect's siege of Zhongnanhai, NATO's bombing of the Chinese embassy in Yugoslavia, and Lee Teng-hui's new two-state theory, the Chinese leadership was under tremendous pressure throughout the year. Many have wondered if that leadership could still hold its own at the turn of the century. This volume provides the reader with an in-depth analysis of how the Chinese leadership coped with the crises during the year. Though there was fair success in managing those crises, serious crises lie ahead which could significantly impact the leadership. China's economic slowdown may be bottoming out, but increasing Party decay, a growing spiritual vacuum, and volatile cross-strait relations are likely to pose serious threats to the leadership.

Rural Democracy in China Tianjian Shi, 2000. Prepared by the East Asian Institute, NUS, which promotes research on East Asian developments, particularly the political, economic, and social development of contemporary China, including Hong Kong and Taiwan, this series of research reports is intended for policy makers and readers who want to keep abreast of the latest developments in China. Why does the Chinese government allow village elections, and what implications do they have for the democratisation of China? By tracing the history of village-level governance reform, Shi, one of the premier authorities on electoral reforms in China, tackles these fundamental questions in this volume.

Sino-US Trade Accord and China's Accession to the World Trade Organization John Wong, Yinhua Mai, Dr. Qi Luo, 2000. The Sino-US trade accord signed in November 1999 in Beijing set a milestone for China's protracted journey towards becoming a member of the World Trade Organization (WTO). China hailed it as a win-win deal. The trade accord showed the commitment of the Chinese government to further transform China into a market economy. The liberalisation measures set forth in the accord may bring about the rise of the private enterprises and further expansion of the services markets, from banking to professional services. However, the implementation of the reform represents a challenge to the Chinese government in managing the potential surge in urban and rural unemployment and the stability of the banking sector This paper analyses the details of the Sino US trade accord and its implications for the Chinese economy

China's Anti-drug Campaign in the Reform Era Yongming Zhou,2000 This volume deals with the re emergence of the drug problem in China in the reform era and the ways in which the authorities deal with it Riding on a sweeping victory over the nationalists the newly established communist government in the early 1950s was thorough and decisive in stamping out the drug problem that had plagued the country for centuries What made the Chinese government s effort effective then were mass campaigns and China s almost total isolation from the outside world In the reform era however with marketization and the country s increasing integration into the capitalist world economy the effectiveness of the old methods has been called into question Severe punishment of offenders has failed to curb the spread of drug trafficking and mass campaigns have aroused scant interest from the populace The much reduced efficacy of the government s anti drug efforts due to the changed macro environment implies that the drug problem in China will persist if not worsen

Taiwan's 2001 Legislative, Magistrates and Mayors Election John Franklin Copper,2002 In December 2001 Taiwan held an election that many observers said in addition to the 2000 election that resulted in opposition party leader Chen Shui bian winning the presidency consolidated its democracy This election made President Chen s party the Democratic Progressive Party DPP the largest party in the legislature and gave him an opportunity to implement his agenda President Chen had not been able to do previously due to the opposition s large legislative majority and the political gridlock that had plagued Taiwan for some months This book examines the political milieu in which the campaign was conducted the candidates party platforms and strategies the campaign and the results of the election It also assesses the domestic and international responses to the election and its political ramifications The author argues that the DPP won using questionable tactics thus diminishing its otherwise significant victory while creating doubts about the OC Taiwan political miracleOCO The KMT lost badly The People First Party created by James Soong after the 2000 presidential election performed very well in this election Former president Lee Teng hui helped found a new party shortly before this election to help President Chen by drawing support away from the KMT it performed well The author concludes that the election mirrored Taiwan s new four party system which is divided into two camps While the OC greenOCO bloc the DPP and Lee s new party performed well the OC blueOCO team the KMT and Soong s party won a majority Taiwan s party politics the author says remain in flux

Taiwanisation George Woei Tsai,Peter Kien-hong Yu,2001 Recent years have seen the emergence of a unique Taiwanese consciousness What this so called Taiwanisation is and how it came about are addressed in the first article The evolution of this Taiwanese consciousness and how it is perceived and presented by major political parties like the Democratic Progressive Party the Kuomintang the People First Party and the New Party are then discussed The process appears to be an irreversible one which might lead to Taiwan s self determination The second article offers a working definition of Taiwanisation It then spells out the significance of understanding Taiwanisation and the motivations of the proponents of the Taiwanisation policy A number of reasons are given as to why such a policy is necessary The authors examine the strategies and tactics in implementing the Taiwanisation policy weighing its effectiveness Beijing's reaction and the problems and prospects of pursuing this policy

The Current State of the Chinese Communist Party in the Countryside Ignatius Wibowo, 2000 This volume discusses the changing role of the village level Chinese Communist Party secretaries in the countryside Rural reforms since 1978 especially the dismantling of the rural commune in the early 1980s have reshaped the social economic and political landscapes of rural China Economic reforms have led to gradual erosion of the power of the party secretaries reduced their income advantages and at the same time increased the complexity and difficulty of their tasks The issue of incentive has emerged for talented people to remain party secretaries The political implications according to the author are a gradual transformation of the nature of the CCP and its turning from a vanguard party to a rearguard party that manages things from the sidelines and in an ad hoc fashion

China's Regional Economic Disparities Since 1978 Xiaowen Tian, 1999 Prepared by the East Asian Institute NUS which promotes research on East Asian developments particularly the political economic and social development of contemporary China including Hong Kong and Taiwan this series of research reports is intended for policy makers and readers who want to keep abreast of the latest developments in China This study suggests that China should accelerate economic growth of its backward interior regions by deepening market oriented reforms on the one hand and by strengthening fiscal transfers from richer to poorer regions on the other

Mystery Of China's Falun Gong, The: Its Rise And Its Sociological Implications John Wong, William T Liu, 1999-12-15 The Party and state leadership in Beijing was rudely awakened to the fact that the state bureaucracies in charge of public security had no idea of Falun Gong's leadership and its functions on April 25 1999 when reportedly ten thousand followers in front of Zhongnanhai staged a peaceful and quiet sit in Since then the world media has reported events and probable causes for the government to outlaw what was determined to be a religious cult that could disturb peace and stability in China In this paper analyses are made of the background and political implications of the sect that had one time dominated the front page of all major newspapers in the world The authors address themselves to questions such as What is the nature of Falun Gong Is it a religious sect a cult or a quasi religious social movement with a hidden political agenda Is it traditional qigong of a sort that packages well established belief systems of Buddhism and Taoism Is it a money making scheme that satisfies the yearning for spiritual fulfillment for the elderly the unemployed and the retired Or is it all of those Will the Falun Gong phenomenon repeat itself in the future Was the government crackdown an over reaction or was it expected These issues are discussed by the authors in separate sections of this paper

Hong Kong in China Andrew M. Marton, 1999 Prepared by the East Asian Institute NUS which promotes research on East Asian developments particularly the political economic and social development of contemporary China including Hong Kong and Taiwan this series of research reports is intended for policy makers and readers who want to keep abreast of the latest developments in China In this volume scholars from China Taiwan Singapore Indonesia Malaysia

Thailand and New Zealand provide a unique array of insights into Hong Kong's transition to China since the 1 July 1997 handover from particular regional viewpoints China's Return to Expansionary Fiscal Policy Shuanglin Lin, 1999
