Understanding Elder Abuse in Minority Populations Toshio Tatara, 2021-10-30 First published in 1999

Research on elder abuse in the United States has made great strides in recent years. As a result we have been able to define and discover the causes of elder abuse, design tools to assess the risk of abuse, develop and implement treatment and prevention strategies and evaluate programs for victims and perpetrators. However, this research has been derived from studies whose subjects were primarily Caucasian. This is not because elder abuse does not take place in minority communities but rather because researchers wanted first to study the issue in its broadest sense.

Family Violence in the United States Denise A. Hines, Kathleen Malley-Morrison, Leila B. Dutton, 2020-08-24. Family Violence in the United States takes an ecological approach to examining violence and abuse within the context of families. Easy to read chapters are organized by exploring the Scope of the Problem, definitions of key terminology, predictors and consequences of different forms of maltreatment. Attention is paid to larger social systems that can contribute to abuse as well as community relationship and individual predictors of both perpetration and victimization. Additionally, there is an emphasis on both prevention and intervention of family violence at various levels of the ecological model. Authors Denise A. Hines, Kathleen Malley-Morrison and Leila B. Dutton help students explore what family violence is and the reasons why it happens. Their approach covers contemporary and controversial topics across the lifespan, including maltreatment of male partners by women, of parents within sexual minority relationships and on college campuses. This 3rd edition is filled with chapter opening cases to prompt discussion within the classroom as well as considerations of context and application in the larger community. Rich in scholarly references and case materials, it is suitable for advanced undergraduates, graduate students and professionals alike.

Professional Care for the Elderly Mentally Ill Liz Matthew, 2013-11-11. Services to older people with mental health problems have gone through radical change in recent years. Legislation has had a profound effect by dictating how care to older people is delivered both within hospital and within the community. The recent government agenda emphasizes cost effectiveness, value for money and accountability. This too is an important driving force in re-evaluating the service, although not everyone would agree with many of the proposed strategies and there are clearly different views as to the appropriateness of many of the services. One thing is certain, however, the move towards interdisciplinary working is here to stay. Not all change has been led by legislation and many innovations have been founded in the day-to-day practices in the care of older people with mental health problems. A service, of course, does not become integrated merely by imposing joint working on a number of professionally based disciplines and in many ways this may not be desirable. At its worst, it produces duplication where people from different backgrounds are all doing the same job. This is not the intention of joint working; instead, it should attempt to improve the quality of service by a rich mix of skills and experience from a number of related disciplines.
