M. C. de Boer,2014-03-12 1 1 Pre Ziminary remarks Input output analysis is one of the most extensively used tools of economic science It has been introduced by Leontief 1941 who assumed that inputs into a production process of a particular sector of economic activity is a constant fraction of the output of that process in physical terms National account statisticians however record the inputs and outputs of sectors of economic activity in money flows. If those flows were evaluated at constant prices pertaining to a certain base year they could represent the physical amounts Leontief dealt with. Then the Leontief assumption turns into constancy of ratios of volumes of inputs to volumes of output. For an overview of traditional input-output analysis we refer to section 4.1.1. In practice however input-output tables in volumes are seldom available since as a rule they are expressed in monetary values and evaluated at current prices. In that case one generally assumes that the ratios between inputs in value terms and outputs in value terms are constant. In appendix B to chapter 4 we prove that the two variants described above can be couched in terms of the neo-classical theory of costs subject to a production function.

Input-output and Regional Economics Harry W. Richardson, 1972      Economic Interdependence and Innovative Activity Christian DeBresson, Esben Sloth Andersen, 1996. Their central thesis is that innovative outputs emerge out of increased social interactions and division of labour through cooperative networks. An authoritative theoretical introduction and some thought provoking conclusions have been prepared by Christian DeBresson.      Input-Output Analysis and the Structure of Income Distribution K. Miyazawa, 2012-12-06. The purpose of this study is in keeping with the shift in concern over the economic problems of growth to those of income distribution in recent years. Income distribution problems may be analyzed by not only the traditional procedures but also by some extensions of the input-output technique as I shall demonstrate in this volume of the Lecture Notes. Some fruitful results are obtained by applying the extended input-output technique to income analysis as well as to output analysis. This volume consists of three parts. These parts may be viewed along two veins with some overlapping unavoidable. 1. Parts One and Two contain extensions of the input-output analysis and 2. Parts One and Three contain studies of the effects of the structure of income distribution on some other economic relationships. First as an extension of the input-output analysis we present a synthesis of the Leontief interindustry matrix multiplier and the Keynesian income multiplier in disaggregated form and introduce a new concept which may be called the Interrelational Income Multiplier as a matrix. It is designed to analyze the interrelationships among various income groups in the process of income formation through the medium of industrial production activity. Although this multi-sector multiplier follows from Leontief's interindustry matrix multiplier it is formulated by the inclusion of the income generation process which is omitted in the usual input-output open model and by projecting the multiplier process into not only the output determination side but also into the income determination side.      Input-output Analysis M. Giaschini, 1988-06. The twenty-two chapters included in this book were written by as many scholars working independently of each other in different countries. They present nevertheless a well integrated picture of systematic advance in the field of input-output analysis on the broad front stretching from formal mathematical modelling through construction of large specialized databases to detailed empirical inquiry and concrete examples of practical applications. While reflecting a great variety of individual interests and working styles these contributions taken together provide evidence of what might appear to be coordinated efforts. This coherence has not been brought about by the central guidance so typical of modern large scale research It simply reflects the internal discipline and cohesiveness of a particular methodological approach In input output analysis empirical inquiry and theoretical model building have to be carried out hand in hand If the aim of the investigation is to provide concrete detailed explanation of observed reality building an elaborate mathematical model makes little sense without an appropriate database The language and the terminology used in the construction of that database must however be exactly the same as that employed in the formulation of the theoretical model The same specifications and definitions must of course be adhered to after the theoretical computations have been completed in the interpretation of the numerical results

Chinese Economic Planning and Input-output Analysis

Karen R. Polenske, Xikang Chen, 1991 Since its beginning in China in the 1960s input output analysis has expanded rapidly in terms of both theoretical developments and empirical applications The scarcity of data coming out of China and the limited access to it makes the three major input output tables published here for the first time in English even more valuable This study will have special significance for economists and planners using the input output system of analysis
