The writers offer varied examples of environmental justice issues such as children's environmental health, campaigns, cancer research, AIDS/HIV activism, the Environmental Genome Project, and popular culture, among many others. Each one focuses on gender and sexuality as crucial factors in women's or gay men's activism and applies environmental justice principles to related struggles for sexual justice. The contributors represent a wide variety of activist and scholarly perspectives, including law, environmental studies, sociology, political science, history, medical anthropology, American studies, English, African and African American studies, women's studies, and gay and lesbian studies, offering multiple vantage points on gender, sexuality, and activism. Feminist, womanist impulses shape and sustain environmental justice movements around the world, making an understanding of gender roles and differences crucial for the success of these efforts.

Just Trade Berta Esperanza Hernández-Truyol, Stephen Joseph Powell, 2012-09-17 In the mid 1940s once the full impact of World War II was assessed the world witnessed major legal developments in both modern trade and human rights Since then volumes have been written about modern trade law and human rights law has seen an equal amount of attention While these topics constitute two of the most active spheres in international law follow similar intellectual trajectories and often feature the same key actors and arenas neither field has actively engaged with the other They co exist in relative isolation at best peppered by occasional hostile debates It has come to be a given that pro trade laws are not good for human rights and legislation that protects human rights hampers vibrant international trade In a bold departure from this canon Just Trade makes a case for reaching a middle ground between these two fields acknowledging their co existence and the significant points at which they overlap Using actual examples from many of the thirty five nations of the Western Hemisphere the authors one a human rights scholar and the other specializing in trade law carefully combine their expertise to examine human rights policies involving conscripted child labor sustainable development promotion of health equality of women human trafficking indigenous peoples poverty citizenship and economic sanctions never overlooking the very real human rights problems that arise from international trade However instead of viewing the two kinds of law as isolated polar and sometimes hostile opposites Berta Esperanza Hernandez Trujol and Stephen J Powell make powerful suggestions for how these intersections may be navigated to promote an international marketplace that embraces both liberal trade and liberal protection of human rights

Quantitative Studies in Green and Conservation Criminology Michael J. Lynch, Stephen F. Pires, 2019-07-17 During the early development and throughout the short history of green conservation criminology limited attention has been directed toward quantitative analyses of relevant environmental crime law and justice concerns While recognizing the importance of establishing a theory and terminology in the early stages of development this book redresses this imbalance The work features contributions that undertake empirical quantitative studies of green conservation crime and justice issues by both conservation and green criminologists The collection highlights the shared concerns of these groups within important forms of ecological crime and victimization and illustrates the ways in which these approaches can be undertaken quantitatively It includes quantitative conservation green criminological studies that represent the work of both well established scholars in these fields along with studies by scholars whose works are less well known and who are also contributing to shaping this area of research The book presents a valuable contribution to the areas of Green and Conservation Criminology It will appeal to academics and students working in these areas
