Environmental Protection of the Himalaya Aamir Ali, 1994-01-01 Environmental Cooperation as a Tool for Conflict Transformation and Resolution Šárka Waisová, 2017-02-17 Environmentalists and advocates of environmental cooperation in conflict frequently discuss certain environmental cooperation project proposals such as the establishment of the Peace Park in the demilitarized zone on the North South Korean border the Indo Pakistani Peace Park on the Siachen Glacier the joint system of trans boundary environmental protection between Thailand and Cambodia and the joint management of Palestinian and Israeli water resources These proposals however are by no means isolated The idea that the development of environmental cooperation in conflict areas can create a bridge between conflict communities and help conflict transformation and resolution is almost two decades old Declarations of cooperation between conflict communities and bringing the potential for peaceful relationships into conflict areas through joint environmental projects appear in the agendas of several international governmental and non governmental organizations However our knowledge of the real workings of environmental cooperation in conflict zones does not correspond with the popularity of these thoughts and actions Although environmental cooperation has been initiated in many conflict areas the differences in individual cases are so large that so far there is neither accurate data nor any idea of the workings of environmental cooperation as a tool for conflict transformation This book addresses some of these issues and offers several new findings Specifically it examines the emergence of environmental cooperation and its function in political conflicts It concludes that not all environmental cooperation is real cooperation and not all real cooperation is favorable The scope form and content of cooperation are important to the peacebuilding potential of environmental cooperation and there are multiple intervening factors such as motivation of actors their value preferences and duration of the support of external actors Human Ecology of Sikkim Kuldip Singh Gulia, 2005 A historic view on the human ecology of sikkim the culture and structure of local ecosystems human ecosystems various richness of human ecosystems monasteries and the monastic architecture customs and their eco biological significances spirit possession shamans and Jhakis ethno botany and adaptations A complete guide to the tourist industry policy makers and scholars Himalayan Environment, Issues and Concerns of Conservation and Development Hari Dang, 2003 Contributed articles includes articles on mountain tourism in Northeastern states of India situated in Himalayan region of India The Himalayan Journal ,2000 Himal ,1994 Environmental Impacts of Mountaineering Michal Apollo, 2021-05-18 This book investigates the consequences of mountaineering hiking trekking climbing on the natural environment These consequences are divided into three groups 1 transformations caused by the mountaineer s or other people s stay in a mountaineering region 2 transformations caused by the mountaineer s travel movement through a mountaineering region with the consideration of the ground type rock rock and grass grass residual soil snow ice and 3 transformations caused by the use of mountaineering equipment Each of the three groups are examined individually for their direct interference with the environment i.e. caused by the main activities of climbing trekking and hiking both for elite and mass mountaineering and their indirect interference caused by auxiliary activity mainly in the case of mass mountaineering. Auxiliary activity includes guide services transport of equipment use of base camp facilities and the delivery of artificial support equipment and supports the main activity. The consequences of mountaineering on the natural environment are characterized in terms of individual components of the environment: land relief soil vegetation fauna and landscape and location zone of mountaineering activity hiking trekking or climbing zone. Because of the connections and interdependence between particular components of the environment biotic and abiotic only preservation of each of them can bring the desired effect: a reduction in the negative impact of mountaineering. This book presents comprehensive research outcomes and serves as a platform for more detailed future studies.

Himalaya Today, 1994 The Alpine Journal, 1995 The Himalayan Club Newsletter, 1985 Nepal National Union Catalogue Bhanu Pathak, Damodar Adhikari, 1997 Tourism and Development in the Himalaya Gyan P. Nyaupane, Dallen J. Timothy, 2022-06-29. This book examines the unique characteristics of the Himalaya that mark them as a special region among other orographic regions of the world. The Himalayan range is an important global asset for ecological climatic cultural spiritual and economic reasons. Its diversity of landscapes climates and biotic systems makes the Himalaya an extremely attractive region for tourism. The book examines tourism and development in the Himalaya region exploring its sociocultural environmental and economic dimensions. The contributors address Himalayan issues from a holistic perspective emphasizing the uniqueness of the region together with concerns it shares with other montane developing parts of the world. With a framework of sustainable development this book elucidates interdisciplinary perspectives on nature society economic development poverty justice health social and environmental vulnerability faith and culture Indigenous rights women conflict heritage and living culture and many other concepts that broaden our understanding of tourism and development in mountain areas. Many contributors are from the Himalaya region or have worked there extensively lending strength through native and insider perspectives. This work will be useful for advanced undergraduate and graduate students research and teaching scholars policy makers practitioners and anyone interested in the Himalaya and their distinctive tourism and development related potential and challenges.

Himalayan Research Bulletin, 1998 Peace Parks Saleem Hassan Ali, 2007. Peace Parks examines ways in which environmental cooperation in multijurisdictional conservation areas may help resolve political and territorial conflicts. Its analysis and case studies of transboundary peace parks focus on how sharing of physical space and management responsibilities can build and sustain peace among countries. It examines roles played by governments military civil society scientists and conservationists and their effects on both ecological management and potential for peace building in these areas. After an historical and theoretical overview that explores economic political and social theories that support peace parks concept and discussion of bioregional management for science and economic development the book presents case studies of existing parks and
