Environmentally Induced Cancer And The Law:

Environmentally Induced Cancer and the Law Frank B. Cross, 1989-06-12 Frank Cross provides a comprehensive treatment of the widely feared problem of environmentally induced cancer. The author takes a threefold approach to the problem: first examining the cancers themselves and what is known about their causes, and then exploring both the government's regulation of these environmental pollutants and the legal remedies available to victims of such cancers. Throughout, new proposals for regulating carcinogens and compensating the victims of environmental cancer are discussed. In Part I, Cross addresses the significant and unique problems presented by the disease of cancer, demonstrating that the limits of scientific knowledge, the absence of a demonstrable safe threshold of exposure, and other special features of the disease create a unique cancer problem for government. The second section examines the various risk management approaches from which a regulatory agency may choose. As Cross demonstrates, government must identify carcinogens, assess the risks they present, and choose control methods—a complex task made even more difficult by the conflicting claims of industry and environmental groups. He concludes this section by proposing future approaches for more effective regulation, including prioritization of the greatest hazards and adoption of a moderate feasibility-based control program. The final chapters explore legal obstacles to victim compensation and argue for fundamental changes in existing common law doctrines to enhance the ability of victim plaintiffs to recover adequate damages. Environmental Law Peter S.

Menell, 2019-01-15 This title was first published in 2002. Since the importance of environmental governance was realized in the late 1960s and early 1970s, this vibrant area of law has witnessed much change. Assembling insightful essays from a number of key contributors, Environmental Law takes stock of developments to date and outlines the challenges for the future.

Environmentally Induced Illnesses Thomas Kerns, 2012-07-24 Readers drawn to Rachel Carson's Silent Spring, Laurie Garrett's The Coming Plague, or Theo Colburn's Our Stolen Future will appreciate this work by Thomas Kerns as well. The growing epidemics of chemically induced illnesses from long-term low-dose exposure to toxicants in both developed and developing nations are being studied by serious researchers. Questions are being raised as to how societies will deal with these new problems. Kerns's book is the first to directly address the ethical dimension of managing environmental health and ubiquitous toxicants such as solvents, pesticides, and artificial fragrances. The work includes recent medical literature on chronic health effects from exposure to toxicants and the social costs of these disorders; relevant historic and human rights documents; recommendations for public policy and legislation; and primary obstacles faced by public health advocates, college instructors, and students, victims of chemical sensitivity disorders, public health workers, scientists, and policymakers who are interested in the challenge of these emerging epidemics will find Kerns's text highly informative. Environmental Crime and its Victims Toine Spapens, Rob White, Marieke Kluin, 2016-05-06 Environmental crime is one of the most profitable and fastest growing areas of international criminal activity. These types of crime, however, do not always produce an immediate consequence and the harm may be diffused As such the complexity of victimization in terms of time space impact and who or what is victimized is one of the reasons why governments and the enforcement community have trouble in finding suitable and effective responses This book provides a diverse and provocative array of arguments critiques and recommendations from leading researchers and scholars in the field of green criminology The chapters are divided into three main sections the first part deals with specific characteristics of some of the major types of environmental crime and its perpetrators the second focuses explicitly on the problem of victimization in cases of environmental crime and the third addresses the question of how to tackle this problem Discussing these topics from the point of view of green criminological theory sociology law enforcement community wellbeing environmental activism and victimology this book will be of great interest to all those concerned about crime and the environment

Victims of Environmental Harm Matthew Hall (Criminologist), 2013 In recent years the increasing focus on climate change and environmental degradation has prompted unprecedented attention being paid towards the criminal liability of individuals organisations and even states for polluting activities These developments have given rise to a new area of criminological study often called green criminology Yet in all the theorising that has taken place in this area there is still a marked absence of specific focus on those actually suffering harm as a result of environmental degradation This book represents a unique attempt to substantively conceptualise and examine the place of such environmental victims in criminal justice systems both nationally and internationally Grounded in a comparative approach and drawing on critical criminological arguments this volume examines many of the areas traditionally considered by victimologists in relation to victims of environmental crime and more widely environmental harm These include victims rights compensation treatment by criminal justice systems and participation in that process The book approaches the issue of environmental victimisation from a social harms perspective as opposed to a criminal harms one thus problematising the definitions of environmental crime found within most jurisdictions Victims of Environmental Harm concludes by mapping out the contours of further research into a developing green victimology and how this agenda might inform criminal justice reform and policy making at national and global levels This book will be of interest to researchers across a number of disciplines including criminology international law victimology socio legal studies and physical sciences as well as professionals involved in policy making processes

Eco-pragmatism Daniel A. Farber, 2000-05 Eco pragmatism takes on the most critical controversies in environmental law today how to weigh economic costs against environmental quality and human life how to assess the long time horizons of environmental problems and how to make appropriate decisions in the face of scientific uncertainty about the scope or even the existence of environmental problems Farber discusses whether and how we should discount the values of future environmental benefits how we should use economic measurements of environmental values and how we can streamline the regulatory process to respond to rapidly changing scientific knowledge The result is a pragmatic decision making framework that is flexible enough to accommodate the unique challenges each case presents
