

EU Enlargements cont...

- The current EU Treaty (Treaty of Nice) does not provide for the expansion of the EU beyond the present 27 states.
- The primary purpose of the Treaty of Nice is to reform the institutional structure to withstand the enlargement of the EU.
- The Treaty does not provide for the voting arrangements to be adopted for more than the present 27 member states. Although the proposed European Constitution does provide for such a mechanism, the ratification of this Treaty is currently on hold. The Treaty of Lisbon provides this mechanism, but has yet to be ratified.
- The EU will have to revisit its enlargement mechanism before any further expansion can take place.
