Working Women in English Society, 1300-1620 Marjorie Keniston McIntosh, 2005-06-02 This study explores the diverse and changing ways in which English women participated in the market economy between 1300 and 1620 Marjorie Keniston McIntosh assesses women's activity by examining their engagement in the production and sale of goods service work credit relationships and leasing of property Using substantial evidence from equity court petitions and microhistorical studies of five market centres she challenges both traditional views of a golden age for women's work and more recent critiques She argues that the level of women's participation in the market economy fluctuated considerably during this period under the pressure of demographic economic social and cultural change Although women always faced gender based handicaps some of them enjoyed wider opportunities during the generations following the plague of 1348-9 By the late sixteenth century however these opportunities had largely disappeared and their work was concentrated at the bottom of the economic system

The Masters of the Revels and Elizabeth I's Court Theatre W. R. Streitberger, 2017-08-17 The Masters of the Revels and Elizabeth I's Court Theatre places the Revels Office and Elizabeth I's court theatre in a pre modern patronage and gift exchange driven world of centralized power in which hospitality liberality and conspicuous display were fundamental aspects of social life W. R. Streitberger reconsiders the relationship between the biographies of the Masters and the conduct of their duties rethinking the organization and development of the Office re-examining its productions and exploring its impact on the development of the commercial theatre The nascent capitalist economy that developed alongside and interpenetrated the gift driven system that was in place during Elizabeth's reign became the vehicle through which the Revels Office along with the commercial theatre was transformed. Beginning in the early 1570s and stretching over a period of twenty years, this change was brought about by a small group of influential Privy Councillors. When this project began in the early 1570s, the Queen's revels were principally in-house productions devised by the Master of the Revels and funded by the Crown. When the project was completed in the late 1590s, the Revels Office had been made responsible for plays only and put on a budget so small that it was incapable of producing them. That job was left to the companies performing at court. Between 1594 and 1600, the revels consisted almost entirely of plays brought in by professional companies in the commercial theatres in London. These companies were patronized by the queen's relatives and friends, and their theatres were protected by the Privy Council. Between 1594 and 1600, for example, all the plays in the revels were supplied by the Admiral's and Chamberlain's Players, which included writers such as Shakespeare and legendary actors such as Edward Alleyn, Richard Burbage, and Will Kempe. The queen's revels essentially became a commercial enterprise paid for by the ordinary Londoners who came to see these companies perform in selected London theatres which were protected by the Council.

Renaissance Drama in Action Martin White, 2013-05-13 Renaissance Drama in Action is a fascinating exploration of Renaissance theatre practice and staging. This refreshingly accessible volume examines the history of the plays on the English stage from the seventeenth century to the present day, explores questions arising from reconstructions with particular reference to the new Globe Theatre, includes interviews with and draws on the work and experience of modern theatre practitioners including Harriet Walter, Matthew Warchus, Trevor Nunn, Stephen Jeffreys, Adrian Noble, and Helen Mirren, includes discussions of familiar plays such as The Duchess of Malfi and Tis Pity She's a Whore, as well as many lesser-known play texts. Communities & Courts in Britain, 1150-1900 Christopher Brooks, Michael Lobban, 1997-01-01 The essays in Communities and Courts in Britain 1150-1900 all reflect the wider concept of legal history: how legal processes fitted into the social and political life of the community and how courts and other legal processes were used by contemporaries. In doing so, they aim both to justify the study of legal history in its own right and to show how legal records, including those of a variety of central and local courts, can be used to further our understanding of a wide range of social, commercial, popular, and political history.
