Emancipation Proclamation

[illegible]

That the executive will, on the first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, at twelve o'clock at noon, within any State or designated part of a State, the people of which are entitled to vote, in person, at the polls, elect a President and Vice President of the United States, and the executive government of the United States, including the military and naval authorities, will recognize and maintain the freedom of such persons, and will do no act or acts to regress such freedom.

That the executive will, on the first day of January, at twelve o'clock at noon, designate the States and parts of States, in any in which the people thereof respectively are entitled to vote in person, at the polls, for the election of a President and Vice President of the United States, and the executive government of the United States, including the military and naval authorities, will recognize and maintain the freedom of such persons, and will do no act or acts to regress such freedom.

That the executive will, on the first day of January, at twelve o'clock at noon, designate the States and parts of States, in any in which the people thereof respectively are entitled to vote in person, at the polls, for the election of a President and Vice President of the United States, and the executive government of the United States, including the military and naval authorities, will recognize and maintain the freedom of such persons, and will do no act or acts to regress such freedom.

[illegible]

And upon this act, solemnly declared to be an act of justice, warranted by the Constitution, upon military necessity, I invoke the benediction of Heaven. I take this solemn oath upon my soul, upon the cross of the United States, to be affirmed.

Done at the City of Washington, this first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, and of the Independence of the United States the eighty-seventh.
