facilitate successful outcomes for common psychosocial difficulties that occur in later life The book describes in depth the unique components and complex interactive influences of these five factors as they apply to older adults seeking mental health treatment A cornerstone of the author s approach is treatment based on stringent care based assessment and thorough monitoring of empirically supported interventions Each factor is considered individually from its empirically supported basis as well as its interaction with the other factors Distinct treatment modules are isolated for each factor and assembled to provide the optimal pathway for clinical treatment The text also addresses the unique difficulties of diagnosing the aging population the pitfalls of existing treatments and the need for brain based models for care Key Features Advocates for integrative interdisciplinary care and primary care involvement for the older adult Emphasizes core components of care depression anxiety cognition pain sleep health issues adjustment in the community Demonstrates how a single problem approach for older adults with psychiatric problems is not effective or efficient care Espouses a Watch and Wait paradigm of care based on person centered diagnosis and careful monitoring of treatment Translates and integrates current research findings with clarity Covers use of SSRIs and other medications suicide subsyndromal states issues involving cost of care for the older patient among other topics Plentiful case examples
