Practice Problems

Q 1. (10 points) The following table illustrates a country's supply and demand for honey which could be produced using one unit of labor. The world market price for honey is:

	Home	Foreign
Home	10	1
Foreign	1	10

- Is Home's supply curve concave or convex? Is Home's demand curve concave or convex? Is the Home labor supply curve concave or convex? Is the Home supply curve concave or convex?
 - Which country has an absolute advantage in honey and which country has an absolute advantage in wheat?
 - What is the autarky price ratio of honey to wheat in each country?
 - Which country has a comparative advantage in wheat and which country has a comparative advantage in honey?
 - Suppose the Home labor force has 100 units, while Foreign has 100 units. Production possibilities are as given. How should the optimal trading equilibrium price be determined for the Home labor force?
 - Suppose the international price is set at 1 (wheat = 1). What is the Home labor force's opportunity cost of producing the good in which it has a comparative advantage. How would the labor force change if the price is set at the price that Home and the world market's equilibrium. How much does it cost to produce one unit of the Home labor force's good (wheat) in the other good?
 - At what level of international price does the Home labor force have to produce the Home labor force?
 - At what level of international price does the Home labor force have to produce the Home labor force?
- Answers:
- Home's MP is convex and Foreign's MP is concave. Home's demand is convex and Foreign's demand is concave.
 - Home has an absolute advantage in honey and Foreign has an absolute advantage in wheat.
 - Home's autarky price is 10 (wheat = 1) and Foreign's autarky price is 1 (wheat = 10).
 - Home has a comparative advantage in wheat and Foreign has a comparative advantage in honey.
 - The optimal trading equilibrium price is determined by the Home labor force's supply and demand curves.
 - The Home labor force's opportunity cost of producing the good in which it has a comparative advantage is 10 (wheat = 1) and the Foreign labor force's opportunity cost of producing the good in which it has a comparative advantage is 1 (wheat = 10).
 - The Home labor force has to produce the Home labor force at a price of 10 (wheat = 1) and the Foreign labor force has to produce the Foreign labor force at a price of 1 (wheat = 10).
 - The Home labor force has to produce the Home labor force at a price of 10 (wheat = 1) and the Foreign labor force has to produce the Foreign labor force at a price of 1 (wheat = 10).

Challenges for Economic Policy Coordination within European Monetary Union Andrew J. Hughes Hallett, Peter Mooslechner, Martin Schürz, 2013-06-29 The launch of European Monetary Union EMU marked the beginning of a new era and its establishment has proved an impressive success at the technical legal and procedural level After all EMU has accelerated economic and political integration in the European Union and tied the economies of the Member States closer together However the performance of the euro high unemployment rates uneven output and investment growth and the issue of structural reforms that have yet to be tackled have raised questions about the performance of EMU in practice There is a general consensus on the justification for economic policy coordination The existing literature on economic policy coordination however seems far from able to provide robust conclusions about how to organize the necessary interaction of institutions and policies Therefore there seems to be a case for re-examining the subject under the new framework set by EMU The objective of such a reassessment is to enhance the understanding of what type of coordination and what institutional setting for policy coordination can be expected to be most favorable Challenges for Economic Policy Coordination within European Monetary Union provides an intellectually stimulating contribution to the ongoing debate

The Endogenization of Government Behaviour in Macroeconomic Models Bern C.J. van Velthoven, 2012-12-06 In chapter 2 we concluded that the present public choice and marxist approaches to the study of political processes as far as relevant for the analysis of economic policy making are unsatisfactory for reasons of incoherency insufficient empirical support and lack of specificity It was suggested that a different approach to the subject might be fruitful To that purpose we now turn our attention to the so called interest function approach to the study of politico economic phenomena that has been developed by Van Winden 1983 See also Van Winden 1987 Van Velthoven and Van Winden 1986 Without paying too much attention to the specific conduct of and intricate relationships between voters politicians bureaucrats and interest groups the interest function approach intends to combine valuable elements of the marxist and public choice analyses According to Van Winden

1983 p 12 this means that in studying the interaction between state and private sector attention should be paid to social classes and the impact of class power relationships on political and economic processes the way that social power structures involving the real control over state activities are maintained or altered the relative autonomy of political processes involving the state and its consequences for as well as its dependence on economic processes individual motivations the possibility of mathematical formalization Section 3 2 will give a general introduction to the concepts and the line of argument of the interest function approach

Keep Reforming: China's Strategic Economic Transformation Zhong Xu, 2020-10-21 This book is about China's economy transformation Currently China's macro leverage ratio has been effectively controlled the central market interest rate one year fixed interest rate has gone down and liquidity is now relatively abundant However financial institutions are generally reluctant to lend the local governments are unwilling to act and the fact that liquidity released by the central bank cannot be effectively transmitted to the real economy is leading to a contraction of credit and higher financing costs for private enterprises Meanwhile the downturn in the internal economic cycle has been exacerbated by the external shocks caused by frictions in Sino US trade and this set of circumstances has contributed to the polarization of expectations regarding China's real economic prospects and policy trends as seen for example in the questions and discussions about policy trends relevant to the private economy Indeed one might claim that the current confusion of expectations even exceeds that of 2008 when the international financial crisis breaks out From a dialectical perspective the more pessimistic expectation of economic trend the easier it is to build consensus on reform and the more remarkable actual effects of reform which must be based on a comprehensive understanding of the phased characteristics of China's economic development In this book based on the experience working in central bank of China the author argues that China's policy should focus on internal demand In the coming period China needs to persevere in the market orientation step up reform and opening up and create a favorable business environment This book represents the following opinions First to reach a common understanding of the medium and high economic growth and avoid the dream of high growth Second to stick to supply side structural reform accelerate economic transformation and structural adjustment and further unleash the reform dividends and growth potential The long term and structural problems cannot be attributed to short term and cyclical problems Third the challenges of external shocks could be also regarded as opportunities which include but not limited to accelerate reform to improve property rights protection state owned capital management corporate governance income distribution and social security Fourth whenever the trade friction happens a multilateral framework is always helpful

Overlapping Generations Stephen E. Spear, Warren Young, 2023-09-04 The 800 pound gorilla in the room of macroeconomics is the question of why the overlapping generations model didn't become the central workhorse model for macroeconomics as opposed to the neoclassical growth model. The authors here explore the co-evolution of the two models.

Economic Policy Agnès Bénassy-Quéré, Benoît Coeuré, Pierre Jacquet, Jean Pisani-Ferry, 2010-09-23 This book is an English language version of Politique économique previously published in French by De Boeck Larcier. It fills a major gap by presenting stylized facts and key questions for modern economic policy together with the essential theoretical tools in major policy fields: fiscal policy, monetary policy, international finance, tax policy, and long-term growth. The causes and lessons of the financial crisis are addressed comprehensively.

Australia and Argentina Tim Duncan, John Fogarty, 1986-07-01 The sad story of post-war Argentina is a timely reminder that rich nations badly managed can gradually become poor. Could an Argentine disaster take place in Australia? Twenty years ago few Australians would have given the idea serious attention. But for twenty years Australians have accepted the case for economic restructuring only to find it almost beyond them to make it happen. This is only the most recent experience Australia and Argentina share. The authors point to parallels extending back into the last century when European immigrants and capital flowed into both antipodean societies at the same time for like reasons and with similar results. No other society shares so much of its economic history with Australia; we can ill afford to ignore the lessons of the Argentine tragedy. Certain political characteristics have thus far held Australia back from Argentine extremes. But both countries have failed to industrialize efficiently and both economies still depend heavily upon politically hard-pressed primary industry. If Australia continues to subordinate the interests of its dynamic industries to those of the more politically influential sectors in Argentine fashion, then so runs the powerful argument of this book: Australia faces an Argentine future.

Antitrust Institutions and Policies in the Globalising Economy Eleonora Poli, 2015-10-19 Eleonora Poli analyses how ideas and material interests have come to determine the evolution of antitrust policies in the USA, EU, Japan, and BRICS. She argues that three major economic crises together with market globalisation have changed governments' perceptions of market competition, giving rise to a neo-liberal global phase.
