Grange Friend Of The Farmer 18671947:

Bonds of Community Nancy Grey Osterud, 2018-08-06 Women held a central place in long settled rural communities like the Nanticoke Valley in upstate New York during the late nineteenth century Their lives were limited by the bonds of kinship and labor but farm women found strength in these bonds as well Although they lacked control over land and were second class citizens these rural women did not occupy a separate sphere Individually and collectively they responded to inequality by actively enlarging the dimensions of sharing in their relationships with men Nancy Grey Osterud uses a rich store of diaries letters and other first person documents in addition to public and organizational records to reconstruct the everyday lives of ordinary women of the past Exploring large questions within the confines of a single community she analyzes the ways in which notions of gender structured women s interactions with their families and neighbors their place in the farm family economy and their participation in organized community activities Rare turn of the century photographs of the rural landscape formal and informal family portraits and scenes of daily life and labor add a special dimension to Bonds of Community It should find a ready audience among women s historians labor historians rural historians and historians of New York State

Putting the Barn Before the House Nancy Grey Osterud, 2012-04-15 Putting the Barn Before the House features the voices and viewpoints of women born before World War I who lived on family farms in south central New York As she did in her previous book Bonds of Community for an earlier period in history Grey Osterud explores the flexible and varied ways that families shared labor and highlights the strategies of mutuality that women adopted to ensure they had a say in family decision making Sharing and exchanging work also linked neighboring households and knit the community together Indeed the culture of cooperation that women espoused laid the basis for the formation of cooperatives that enabled these dairy farmers to contest the power of agribusiness and obtain better returns for their labor Osterud recounts this story through the words of the women and men who lived it and carefully explores their views about gender labor and power which offered an alternative to the ideas that prevailed in American society Most women saw putting the barn before the house investing capital and labor in productive operations rather than spending money on consumer goods or devoting time to mere housework as a necessary and rational course for families who were determined to make a living on the land and if possible to pass on viable farms to the next generation Some women preferred working outdoors to what seemed to them the thankless tasks of urban housewives while others worked off the farm to support the family Husbands and wives as well as parents and children debated what was best and negotiated over how to allocate their limited labor and capital and plan for an uncertain future Osterud tells the story of an agricultural community in transition amid an industrializing age with care and skill

Reclaiming the Rural Kim Donehower, Charlotte Hogg, Eileen E Schell, 2012 Reclaiming the Rural moves beyond typical arguments for the preservation abandonment or modernization of rural communities analyzing how communities in the United States Canada and Mexico sustain themselves economically environmentally intellectually and

The Big House after Slavery Amy Feely Morsman, 2010-10-13 The Big House after Slavery examines the economic social and political challenges that Virginia planter families faced following Confederate defeat and emancipation Amy Feely Morsman addresses how men and women of the planter class responded to postwar problems and how their adaptations to life without slavery altered their marital relationships and their conceptions of gender roles Unable to afford many servants in the new free labor economy many of Virginia s former masters put themselves to work on their plantations and their wives had to expand their responsibilities as well taking on the tasks of cooking and cleaning in addition to working in the garden the henhouse and the dairy Laboring in these ways and struggling to maintain their standing as elites contributed to an identity crisis among Virginia planters It also led them to practice mutuality within their own marriages and to reconsider what proper Southern womanhood and manhood meant in the new postwar order Using newspapers periodicals organization records and numerous letters from Virginia plantation families Morsman captures how these frustrated elites made sense of embarrassing postwar changes in the private but also in the public spheres they inhabited Morsman suggests that the planters adaptations may have been carried forward by their adult children away from the crumbling plantations and into the
