Paludi, 1996-03-01 Based on her work as a private consultant Michele A Paludi recognized the need for an updated version of her book Ivory Power Sexual Harassment on Campus This need for a second edition was not only facilitated by updated case law but also by the considerable work published since the first edition concerning training of personnel at colleges and universities and setting up policy statements and effective grievance procedures Additional attention is devoted to consensual relationships between faculty and students a topic only touched upon lightly a few years ago The events of the last few years at Antioch College and the University of Virginia that have stimulated discussion on peer sexual harassment also led to the need for a second edition of Ivory Power For this edition Dr Paludi invited the contributors of Ivory Power to update their chapters focusing on new research case law and theory and new contributors offer their perspectives on sexual harassment in the academic environment New forewords have been added most notable are those written by clergy one a Methodist one a Roman Catholic who are dealing with victims of sexual harassment in their parish
