scholarly account of Homer's work for pictorial magazines such as Harper's Weekly, Appleton's Monthly and Every Saturday. Homer's work for pictorial magazines is substantial to say the least. It amounts to some 250 wood engraved images published between 1857 and 1875. These wood engravings are collected assiduously and are exhibited frequently in museums. They differ from Homer's book illustrations in that they are independent from the texts Homer chose and treated the great majority of his magazine subjects much as he did his paintings. They are in essence original works of graphic art. The illustrations reproduced here cover a remarkable range. They constitute the first substantial body of American art about the life of the city streets, the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays, abolition and the New Woman. They include compelling treatments of the Civil War, rural childhood and wilderness. They also comprise an essential contribution to the study of one of the masters of American art.

Winslow Homer in the Adirondacks David Tatham, 2004-04-01. In this lavishly illustrated volume, David Tatham turns his eye to Winslow Homer's Adirondack oils, drawings, prints and watercolors: more than a hundred pieces from the artist's many visits to the region between 1870 and 1910. Homer's affinity for this remote region of New York State lasted for forty years. No other place, not even Prout's Neck in Maine, held his attention as an artist for so long a period. Nearly every time he set out for the Adirondacks, he went to the same two places: the environs of Keene Valley and a group of rustic buildings in a forest clearing in the Essex County township of Minerva, south of the High Peaks. Tatham casts Homer's early Adirondack works as postbellum pastorals and explores the impact of Darwinian thought on Homer's later works. He examines the concepts of landscape and wilderness, the development of the Adirondack Park and the forest preservation movement, as well as Homer's contemporaneous work in Maine, the Caribbean and England.
