Globalization is a general term for economic, political, cultural, and environmental interconnections realized through advanced technologies. Some of these technologies include transportation, internet, and telecommunication (Kofman, 2003). Although the word global has been in existence for the last four hundred years, the term globalization is believed to have been coined in the early 1960s. In the early 21st century, it was estimated that there were millions of virtual and printed spaces referring to globalization (Kofman, 2003).

Classical international trade theories depict the key factors spearheading international specialization and the associated international trade. These theories largely depend on factors of production such as capital, labor, and land. Some of the classical international trade theories that support the concept of globalization include Mercantilism, Heckscher-Ohlin, New Trade, Porter's, David Ricardo, and Life Cycle (Kofman, 2003).

Media and economists have identified various drivers of globalization. These drivers of globalization can be categorized into five different categories; technological drivers, political drivers, market drivers, cost drivers, and competitive drivers (Kofman, 2003). Fundamentally, technology has shaped and set the base for modern globalization. In the late 19th century, advancements in freight and aircraft industries were considered as the main drivers of globalization. However, with the inventions in the telecommunication, IT industries, and increased internet connectivity, internet has come to be a major driver of modern globalization. Currently, increased usage of the internet has revolutionized modern information systems (Kofman, 2003). Likewise, liberalized trading rules and deregulated markets are considered as the major political players spearheading globalization. As a result, tariffs have been lowered allowing global direct investments. Correspondingly, international markets have provided more opportunities and customers as the domestic markets saturate. In addition, global marketing channels and advancement in marketing are also the major market drivers of globalization (Kofman, 2003). Due to firms being lured to establish in countries or regions considered source and cost efficient, globalization has thrived well in those countries. Consequently, global inter-firm competition has forced most of the organizations and

Globalization Theory And Practice:

Globalization Eleonore Kofman, Gillian Youngs, 1996-01-01 Globalization and the related issues of power and identity are central concerns in international studies whether viewed from a political economic spatial or human perspective The fully updated second edition of this major collection brings together a multi disciplinary group of international scholars to interrogate globalization in theory and practice Gender identity citizenship migration issues related to the state and economic and technological change are analyzed in depth Several of the authors have revised their chapters from the earlier edition and others have provided completely new contributions in key areas such as the internet social movements environmental security and world cities Two new introductory chapters written by the editors outline the theory and practice of international relations and political geography at the dawn of the twenty first century Several further chapters highlight different aspects of inequality which have become central to the globalization debate Book jacket Globalization Eleonore Kofman, Gillian Youngs, 2003-03-20 This revised second edition of a popular textbook provides a powerful new context for debates about globalization through its identification of both continuities and new concerns and demonstrates the cross disciplinary imperatives for investigating these areas Selected contributors Spike V Peterson Simon Dalby Philip Cerny Jan Jindy Petman Anne Sisson Runyan Marianne Marchand Development After Globalization John S. Saul, 2006 Publisher description Why Globalization Matters Barrie Axford, 2021-11-24 In what are generally understood as unsettled times this book explores the possibility and desirability of bringing integrated theory back into globalization research While there can hardly be a single and all encompassing grand theory of globalization in itself is there scope for the development of a general and systematic approach to globalization dynamics past and present In other words can theorizations of the global be holistic and integrative taking place in tandem with methodological frameworks that consider the contradictory and uneven layering of different transnational practices across all social relations Is it possible to develop a general and integrated approach to globalization that links theory and practice in a socially engaged way and is it desirable to do so Many relevant academic and non academic developments suggest not For example the postmodernist turn at the end of the last century expressed a profound incredulity toward grand narratives in the social sciences and humanities A decade later some neo Marxist critics condemned the follies of globalization theory More recently the post truth interventions of national populists suggest not only that globalism is the political enemy but also that attempts to understand its patterns and manifestations are relative or irrelevant Taking Manfred Steger and Paul James acclaimed book Globalization Matters as a back drop against which to interrogate these issues contributors from a variety of disciplinary analytical and normative standpoints deliver a thoughtful and much needed assessment of the scholarship of globalization and the ways it is theorized The chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of the journal Globalizations Regionalism and Globalization Sajal Lahiri, 2001 This volume brings together articles on three primary elements of globalization multilateralism regionalism and unilateralism

Neoliberal Globalization and Institutional Reform Sadik Ünay, 2006 This book represents the manifestation of a long term effort to explore the multifaceted impact of neo liberal globalisation on institutional reform in the developing world with special reference to the transformation trajectory of State Planning Organisation in Turkey Analytically it strives to locate the in depth analysis of Turkish development planning and the changing fortunes of the State Planning Organisation within the broader context of the states versus markets debate in the political economy literature in order to assess the technical viability and institutional manifestations of development planning under the profound and ever increasing pressures of globalisation To this end a comparative institutional theoretical framework is adopted which engages critically with the neo classical neo liberal approach to macroeconomic policy making and gauges the potential influence of domestic institutional structures in generating effective responses to changes in global economy

The Forces of Economic Globalization Katherine Lynch, Katherine L. Lynch, 2003-01-01 Increased economic interdependencies and trade flows between states innovations in information technology and computer networks a global shift toward market economies and regional and multilateral trade arrangements have all led to an increasingly globalized world economy The Forces of Economic Globalization Challenges to the Regime of International Commercial Arbitration examines some of the challenges facing the regime of international commercial arbitration in the contemporary global economy. It considers the debates concerning the transformation of the global order and the role of nation states within the context of international commercial arbitration. Issues discussed include the transformative effect of economic globalization, the role of the epistemic community and the increased institutionalization within the international arbitral regime, the nationalization of international commercial arbitration and the denationalization and harmonization trends, the competitive nature of legislative reform, convergence and divergence in the international arbitral process, multilateralism and regionalism, market modernization and transnationalism, globalization and lex mercatoria and the development of online arbitration schemes in cyberspace. This book seeks to analyze the inner penetration of a form of world polity or transnational order comprised of part epistemic community, institutional networks, national laws and multilateral conventions, norms, rules, principles and transnational ideology on the traditional notion of state sovereignty within the international arbitral regime. The book will interest practitioners and academics with an interest in international commercial arbitration.
