

GLOSSARY OF NAUTICAL TERMS

Shell-built	A modern (somewhat misleading) term used to describe the process by which all or part of the outer hull planking was erected before frames were attached to it. In pure shell-built hulls, outer planking was self-supporting and formed the primary structure; the framework fastened to it formed the secondary, or stiffening, structure.
Shroud	A rope or wire support used to steady a mast to the side of the hull.
Side	Described variously as the part of a hull above the waterline or the part above the turn of the bilge .
Sided	The dimensions of an unmoulded surface; the distance across an outer frame or surface, the forward or after surface of a stem or sternpost , or the upper surface of a keel or keelson . See Moulded for further information on timber dimensions.
Skeg	A triangular piece, resembling external deadwood placed above the after end of the keel ; used to reinforce the sternpost and improve the sailing qualities of small craft and flat-bottomed vessels. Alternatively, the angular after end of the keel, on which the rudder stock was mounted or which was used to protect the forward edge of the rudder.
Standing knee	A knee mounted on deck with its vertical arm pointing upwards; most commonly used to reinforce the junction between the deck and the side .
Starboard	The right side of a vessel when facing forward.
Steering oar	An oar used to steer a small vessel, either from the side or stern . A steering oar should not be confused with a quarter rudder which is permanently mounted and turns about a fixed axis.
Stem (stempost)	A vertical or upward curving timber or assembly of timbers, scarfed to the keel at its lower end, into which the two sides of the bow were fitted.
Stem head	The upper end of the stem .
Stern	The after end of a vessel.
Sternpost	A vertical or upward curving timber or assembly of timbers stepped into or scarfed to the after end of the keel .
Strake	A continuous line of planks running from bow to stern .
