in powerfully gendered and racialized ways Protecting the World's Children Sidsel Roalkvam, Desmond McNeill, Stuart Blume, 2013-05-09 Vaccination programmes now represent a major part of the effort devoted to improving the health of children in developing countries. These donor funded programmes tend to be global in scope and focus on worldwide goals and targets such as polio eradication and the Millennium Development Goals. Health policy makers at the national level are expected to implement these programmes in a standard manner and report progress according to a few standard indicators. Pressures and incentives to achieve the targets set are then transmitted down to the community level health worker who actually meets the parents and children to implement the programmes. Drawing on first hand original research in India and Malawi carried out by the contributors as well as existing literature, Protecting the World's Children Immunisation policies and practices suggests that there is little or no scope allowed for the effects of variance in the way health systems work, the difficulties and tensions faced by health workers or differences in the way people think about childhood illnesses that reflect cultural differences. The book argues that the need to show progress can create distortions and lead to the production of misleading data and an unwillingness to report problems. It proposes that vaccines could more effectively serve children's health needs if immunisation programmes are better understood and acknowledged and if local knowledge and realities were enabled to inform national and international health policy. Written by an international interdisciplinary team of experts in immunisation policy, Protecting the World's Children is an integrative study of immunisation policy and practice at a global, national and community level and is an essential resource for researchers and practitioners in international and public health as well as professionals in international and development studies.

Autonomy and Human Rights in Health Care David N. Weisstub, Guillermo Díaz Pintos, 2007-12-20 Autonomy and Human Rights in Healthcare: An International Perspective is a group of essays published in memory of David Thomasma, one of the leading humanists in the field of bioethics during the twentieth century. A pioneer in the field of multidisciplinary research having integrated major theological and philosophical traditions in the west with modern science, Thomasma was a role model to the authors who have devoted essays to his major avenues of inquiry. The authors represent many different countries and disciplines throughout the globe. The volume deals with the pressing issue of how to ground a universal bioethics in the context of the conflicted world of combative cultures and perspectives.

Familiar Medicine David Craig, 2002-06-30 One of the first medical ethnographies to be written on contemporary Vietnam, Familiar Medicine examines the practical ways in which people of the Red River Delta make sense of their bodies, illness and medicine. Traditional knowledge and practices have persisted but are now expressed through and alongside global medical knowledge and commodities. Western medicine has been eagerly adopted and incorporated into everyday life in Vietnam but not entirely on its own terms. Familiar Medicine takes a conjectural interdisciplinary approach to its subject, weaving together history, ethnography, cultural geography and survey materials to provide a rich and readable account of local practices in the context of an increasingly globalized world and growing microbial resistance to antibiotics.

Theoretically it draws on current critical and cultural theory in particular applying Pierre Bourdieu's work on habitus and practical logics in innovative but approachable ways David Craig addresses a range of contemporary fascinations in medical anthropology and the sociology of health and illness from the trafficking of medical commodities and ideas under globalization to the hybridization of local cultural formations knowledge and practices His book will be required reading for international workers in health and development in Vietnam and a rich resource for courses in cultural geography anthropology medical sociology regional studies and public and international health
