The Coming African Hour Luc Sindjoun, 2010 The Coming African hour is not a slogan nor wishful thinking It is a conclusion that derives from an insightful analysis of the current situation pertaining on the continent Several African scholars coming from different regions and academic backgrounds are elaborating ideas and arguments in order to explain the constraints and to illustrate the opportunities The result of that scientific gathering is a book that synthesizes and renews the reflections on development What is at stake is not to be pessimistic or optimistic about Africa The epistemological challenge is to understand what is going on By focusing on converging and diverging African realities on the issues of state civil society gender and development strategies the authors of the book show under which conditions the African hour is coming At that level the commitment for political science meets the commitment for Africa The main success of this book is to overcome the preconceived ideas and self fulfilling prophecies about Africa Here the analysis avoids the trap of indulgence then hope is based on truth Consequently the coming African hour is not inescapable it is as analyzed a possibility that its achievement depends on institutional human political social and economic factors

Global Perspectives in the Geography Curriculum Alex Standish, 2008-10-07 For geographers across the globe this book provides the arguments for a return to the teaching of geography and why they should reject the politicisation of the subject by education policy makers and politicians Standish's careful critique shows the necessity of a depoliticised geography curriculum the irony of which would be that it would ensure that every child could point to Iraq Iran and Afghanistan on a map Prof Dennis Hayes Oxford Brookes University UK A prescient and critical analysis of the changing face of geography teaching This book deserves to be widely read and debated Alex Standish's book puts current trends in geography teaching in historical and critical context It comprises a forthright and timely defence of geographical education for its own sake Dr Jim Butcher FRSA Department of Sport Science Tourism and Leisure Canterbury Christ Church University Since the early 1990s educational policy makers and some subject leaders have been seeking to fundamentally change the teaching of geography in UK and US schools from a subject which encourages students to explore spatial concepts ideas and skills to a more ethics based subject concerned with the promotion of environmentalism cultural diversity and social justice In this book the new approach is critically examined within a historical and ideological context addressing a number of fundamental questions Should geography be used as a tool for the delivery of citizenship ideals How does this affect the intellectual and moral value of geographical education for young people If the state and teachers are taking more responsibility for the values attitudes and emotional responses of students how will they learn to develop these qualities for themselves If global perspectives shift the focus of education from learning about the outside world to learning about the self what is its vision of social progress and conception of social change This book advocates a return to liberal models of education arguing that the new approach to geography currently being promoted for schools fundamentally undermines the educational value of the subject and the freedom of young people to shape the world in which they live A vital resource for teachers and student teachers alike Global Perspectives in the Geography Curriculum makes a significant contribution to the growing debate about the future direction of the discipline itself Canadian Language Policies in Comparative Perspective Michael A. Morris, 2010 A systematic examination of language policies in Canada based on domestic and international comparisons
