

Governance, Globalisation, the Nation-State and Rousseau's Social Contract

Khandakar Qudrat-I Elahi PhD

Over the past several decades, globalisation has facilitated extraordinary expansions in worldwide human interactions. As a result, many social science scholars argue, aggressively perhaps, that the traditional nation-state model has become essentially obsolete. To correct this consequence, suggestions have been made for incorporating new actors in the nation-state governance model, who include supra-national agencies and inter-governmental bodies, executives of business corporations and civil society organisations. This paper argues that the suggested induction of new actors in the governance machinery is not necessarily needed. But the overwhelming globalising phenomenon does demand modernising the existing nation-state model so that it can adapt to the evolving worldwide human affairs. In this respect, the paper prescribes two electoral measures specifically related to democracy: (i) making electoral rule truly democratic and (ii) creating level-playing field in politics.

I. Introduction

Over the past three decades or so, the forces of globalisation have been dominating contemporary world politics and economics. Globalisation, a fancy current affair vocabulary nowadays, was coined in the 1980's to imply phenomenal growth in worldwide economic transactions. Very soon, however, the term embraced all types of human interactions. Peoples belonging to independent countries around the planet got connected, directly or indirectly, through economic, political and cultural activities. To recognise these increased volume as well as frequency of international interactions, some authors invented the term 'global village'.

These phenomenal growths in global human interactions have been caused by unprecedented developments in science and technology, particularly in the areas of communication, transportation and information. The process has produced miracles as well as mud. At the one pole, some commentators see all virtues in these developments. They argue that globalisation has led to tremendous economic growth, which is enabling people around the world enjoy better standards of living (Bhagwati, 2005, 2006; Dollar & Kraay, 2002). Critics, on the contrary, point to darker aspects of these developments (Rodrik, 2011; Stiglitz, 2003). In the economic front, they hold, the world has been polarised between haves and have-nots. The inter-state relationships, it is argued, have been polluted by the proliferation of transnational terrorisms and border conflicts. Finally, global warming and environmental pollutions are endangering the very survival of human species on earth.

Both views reflect extreme aspects of this great human phenomenon, which means the truth lies somewhere in-between. But everyone seems to agree that the process of globalisation has created an international situation which demands some kind of new governance structure both at national and international levels. The general basis of this assessment seems founded on the notion that the traditional nation-state model has become outdated to deal with the contemporary world activities (Tanzi, 1998; Willets, 1999). As Finger (1999:1) writes: "The special importance of both the concept and the globalization exerts on the political organisations of humanity The author starts from a diagnosis of the process of globalisation The question central to the book can be formulated as follows How can the social moral and legal achievements of the nation state be retained while its structure is reshaped to satisfy the requirements of a globalised world Civil Society, Religion and Global Governance Helen James, 2007-04-11 This is one of the first books to explore the nexus between civil society religion and global governance their impact on human security and well being and significance for current debates in international politics The contributors examine salient aspects of the secular state whose monopoly on and control of institutional violence has reified its use of power to such an extent that the modernistic separation of church and state is being called into question as institutional limits are sought to the abuse of that power The volume is clearly divided into six key sections human security and human rights the politics of civil religion the ethics of civil development civil society and global governance cross cultural perspectives on institutional development for civil society international civil society Within these sections the illuminating case studies span a wide geographical extent from Central and Eastern Europe to Egypt to Latin America Iran Bangladesh Australia the Pacific and East and Southeast Asia Civil Society Religion and Global Governance will be of strong interest to students policy makers and researchers in the fields of human rights religion political science and sociology A Social Contract with Business as the Basis for a Postmodern MBA in a World of Inclusive Globalisation Jopie Coetzee, 2009 In A Social Contract with Business as the Basis for a Postmodern MBA in a World of Inclusive Globalisation Jopie Coetzee places the MBA qualification on the centre stage of the 21st century's global challenges facing humanity He makes three substantial and original contributions to the field of Business Leadership Firstly he introduces a new research methodology termed critical metasynthesis Secondly he presents a new model termed The Social Contract with Business as the raison d'être for postmodern business Thirdly he develops a new educational context a new vocabulary as well as guidelines for a new canon of knowledge for business education and curriculum design for the postmodern MBA Neo-Liberal Globalism and Social Sustainable Globalisation, 2006-06-01 According to mainstream economic thinking inspired by the ideas of Smith Ricardo and others globalisation of the world economy is profitable But unlike these classic writers neoliberal economists pay little attention to the moral and social consequences of economic policies Despite the fact that present social circumstances differ a great deal from those in the time of Smith and Ricardo they keep maintaining that an invisible hand will further social ends In doing so they ignore growing poverty worldwide and the exclusion of countries from the international legal order and of people from the right to social participation and freedom This book pays attention to economic aspects of globalisation and also to philosophical legal social cultural ethical and ecological aspects Its aim is to contribute to possible solutions for worldwide problems that accompany the globalisation process Responding to Globalisation Jeffrey A. Hart, Aseem Prakash, 2002-11-01 This rigorous survey and companion volume to Coping with Globalization focuses on the political ideological and economic factors lying behind responses to globalization A panel of international experts examine subjects which include The international monetary system after the Euro The response of the Japanese software industry to globalization The dynamics of globalization strategy in South Korea Australian integration into the global economy The impact on China and Russia in their moves toward a market economy

Global Climate Constitutionalism "from below" Manuela Niehaus,2023-12-26 Global climate constitutionalism is seen as a possible legal answer to the social and political unwillingness of states to effectively tackle climate change as a global problem The constitutionalisation of international climate law is supposed to ensure greater participation of non state actors such as NGOs or individuals and a rollback of state sovereignty where states do not care about meeting their climate commitments This book addresses the question of whether non state actors such as NGOs or individuals create international climate law through so called climate change litigation Against the background of Peter H berle s theory of the open society of constitutional interpreters four selected cases Urgenda v Netherlands Leghari v Pakistan Juliana v United States of America Future Generations v Colombia are used to examine how actors not formally recognized as subjects of international law re interpret national and international law and thereby contribute to the constitutionalisation of the international climate law regime

Globalisation and Economic Security in East Asia Helen E. Nesadurai,2012-09-11 What is the relationship between globalization and economic security Globalisation and Economic Security in East Asia is an incisive new engagement with this important question that uses detailed conceptual exploration and fresh empirical analysis Viewing traditional neorealist conceptions of economic security as overly narrow this new study suggests that any conception of economic security in the contemporary era needs to also pay close attention to the nature of global capitalism and the insecurities it generates for societies and individuals This uniquely open ended approach to conceptualizing economic security is supported by the East Asian experience The country case studies included here reveal that while economic security has largely been posed as one of ensuring sustainable economic growth and equitable social development particularly following the 1997 to 1998 Asian financial crisis other more realist conceptions of economic security have not become irrelevant This is also an exploration of whether and how national regional and multilateral institutions as well as non state regional mechanisms help policy makers meet the task of governing in the interests of economic security This book will be of great interest to all students and scholars of international relations international political economy of East Asia globalization and security studies

Globalization and Social Responsibility Kiymet Tunca Caliyurt,David Crowther,2008-12-11 Over the last decade the question of the relationship between organisations and society has been subject to much debate often of a critical nature The decade has seen protests concerning the actions of organisations exposures of corporate exploitation and unfolding accounting scandals At the same time ethical behaviour and a concern for the environment have been shown to have a positive correlation with corporate performance The nature of corporate social responsibility is therefore a topical one for businesses and academics There are however many different perspectives upon what is meant by corporate social responsibility and how this might be applied within organisations This book explores some of these different perspectives based upon the experiences of different people in different parts of the world There has been much written about globalisation some of it positive and much of it negative It is a subject which arouses definite opinions Despite the fact that the word globalisation is part of the title of this book it is not our intention to contribute to this debate Instead we use the word globalisation in its original sense to represent the ubiquity of the concern for Corporate Social Responsibility CSR which is the subject matter of this book Specifically we are concerned with the social contract between an organisation and its stakeholders It is apparent that any actions which an organisation undertakes will have an effect not just upon itself but also upon the external environment within which that organisation resides In considering the effect of the organisation upon its external environment it must be recognised that this environment includes both the business environment in which the firm is operating the local societal environment in which the organisation is located and the wider global environment Effectively therefore there is a social contract between organizations and their stakeholders Recognition of the rights of all stakeholders and the duty of a business to be accountable in this wider context therefore has been largely a relatively recent phenomenon The economic view of accountability only to owners has only recently been subject to debate to any considerable extent In the current environment there is a need to debate this issue and its implications This book therefore recognises the international scope of the interest in corporate social responsibility both through the contributions made by the authors of the respective chapters who come from various parts of the world and also through the international importance of the perspectives offered by these contributors In doing so the various authors demonstrate that corporations are a part of society just as much as each of us is as a individual Furthermore they demonstrate that the issues and concerns are not local ones but are international in scope and concern us all The contributions to this book provide a representation of the range of concern for this relationship and the range of topics which fall within the subject matter of CSR Among the authors who have contributed to this book are representatives from every continent and from a wide range of disciplines The topics which are considered in the various chapters are equally diverse
