

GLOBALIZATION: A THEOLOGICAL OVERVIEW

Domenic Marbaniang

Presented at CMS Consultation, UBS, Pune. January 2014

Defining Globalization

Globalization seems like a Loch Ness monster that evades a particular definition. There are descriptive definitions as well as normative and prescriptive ones; the descriptive varying according to the variation of approaches and the normative standing for or against a form of globalization.

Descriptive theories of globalisation are those that inductively define the nature of globalisation by trying to identify its essential characteristics. A few common definitions are as follows:

Globalisation can be defined as a set of economic, social, technological, political and cultural structures and processes arising from the changing character of the production, consumption and trade of goods and assets that comprise the base of the international political economy. (UNESCO)<sup>1</sup>

Globalization is a transplanetary process or set of processes involving increasing liquidity and the growing multidirectional flows of people, objects, places and information as well as the structures they encounter and create that are barriers to, or expedite, those flows... (George Ritzer)<sup>2</sup>

Globalization can thus be defined as the intensification of worldwide social relations which link distant localities in such a way that local happenings are shaped by events occurring many miles away and vice versa. (Anthony Giddens, Former Director of the London School of Economics)<sup>3</sup>

The concept of globalization reflects the sense of an immense enlargement of world communication, as well as of the horizon of a world market, both of which seem far more tangible and immediate than in earlier stages of modernity." (Fredric Jameson, Professor of Literature, Duke University)

Globalization may be thought of as a process (or set of processes) which embodies a transformation in the spatial organization of social relations and transactions - assessed in terms of their extensity,
